FUND SURPLUS BIG HEADACHE, COUNCIL FINDS

$633,000 Balance Inspires Deluge of Requests For Improvements Pay Hikes.

EYE AIRPORT PROJECT

Councilmen Study Appeals While Keeping $100,000 In Mind For New Port.

City officials are finding that a surplus is no fun.

Ever since the Ohio Chamber of Commerce found in a survey of the Mansfield government that the city may have a surplus of $633,000 in all funds by the end of the year, demands for city-financed projects and tax remittals have swamped council and Mayor W. J. Locke.

City council will be faced with the biggest request of them all—a $35 monthly pay increase for every city employe — when it meets in an adjourned session Tuesday night.

With one eye on the proposed airport project which may require a city contribution of $100,000 within a few weeks, council will take up the salary increase request with committees representing city employes. The pay boosts asked by city workers would aggregate approximately $69,000 annually.

Council also is expected to study a proposed $27,000 sewer project for the south end of the city and the purchase of new radio equipment for the police department which will cost about $4,500.

While the demands for expenditure of city funds continue to come in, council probably will act on a proposal to reduce city income further at its Tuesday night meeting. Legislation which received its first reading by council last week would give motorists more free parking hours in the downtown section, automatically reducing the revenue from parking meters.

That council realizes it's going to have to tighten the city's financial belt a little was shown at a meeting last Tuesday night when Russell Porch, member from the First ward, reminded fellow councilmen that "we've got to begin planning for this airport project and realize that there must be an end to spending somewhere."

Council promptly turned down two requests for street improve-

HIJACKERS BUSY

Trap Midwest Liquor Shipments For Black Market.

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— Liquor hijackers are returning to midwest highways to menace legitimate shippers, underwriters of liquor insurance said today.

Lured by rising prices and a growing liquor shortage, hijackers are finding a ready outlet for their loot in the bootleg market, which is reaping millions in profits for syndicates, a spokesman for Allied Liquor Industries, Inc., reported.

Cafe owners are willing to pay illegal profits ranging up to $35 a case for liquor, a reporter for the Cleveland Press discovered last week when he posed as a cafe operator. He ordered 100 cases, which he reported had been watered down to 80 proof.

Justice Department Goes Ahead; Army Silent On 'Abetting' Charge.

BULLETIN

CINCINNATI—(U.P.)—The federal government today filed suits in U. S. district court to reclaim damages from 10 high-ranking executives of the Wright Aeronautical corporation plant in Lockland, charged by a Truman committee report with production of "defective" war equipment.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The justice department proceeded with its investigation of the Curtiss-Wright Aircraft Corporation today, while the war department still offered no comment on charges of the senate Truman committee that army officers "abetted" Curtiss-Wright in selling defective aircraft equipment to the government.

The Truman report, first made public over the week end, said faulty equipment turned out by the Lockland, O., plant of Wright Aeronautical corporation, a Curtiss-Wright subsidiary, passed inspection tests because the company falsified reports and forged tests, and that "some army officers abetted the company in these practices."

The justice department has filed suit against Curtiss-Wright President G. W. Vaughan and seven officers of Wright aeronautical, but Assistant Attorney General Tom C. Clark of the war frauds division said the suits were filed principally to prevent private in-

The convention was attended by more than 300 Legionnaires from 10 north central Ohio counties.

Wounded As Gun Goes Off While On Prowler Hunt

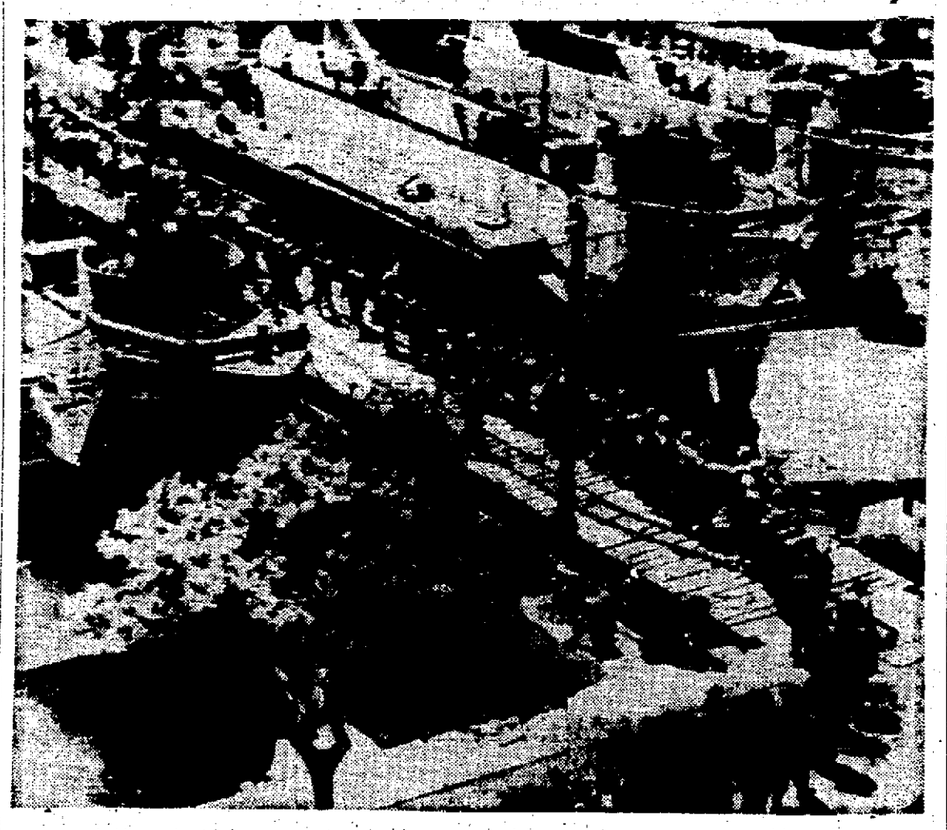
Mrs. Elenore Evans, 28, of Martha avenue, East Mansfield, is recovering at General hospital today from a bullet wound sustained when she accidentally discharged a .32 calibre revolver into her left shoulder Sunday evening.

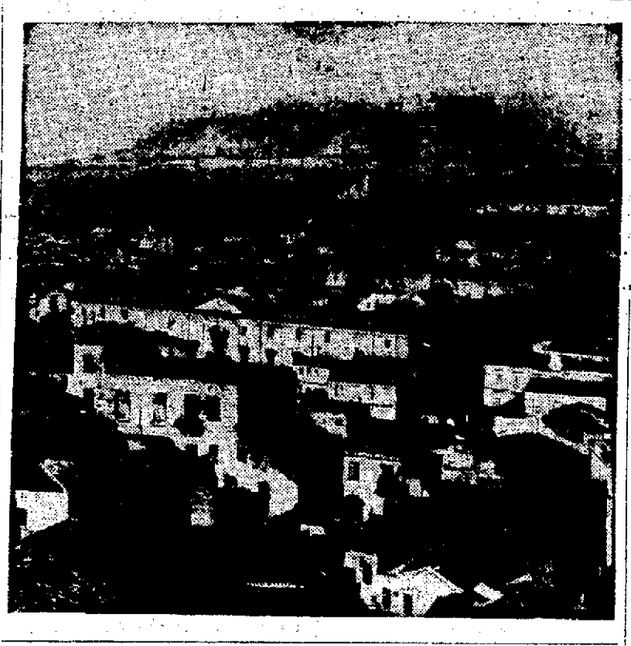
Mrs. Evans told neighbors who came to investigate the shot and summoned an ambulance, that she had seen a man looking in the window and ran upstairs to get the revolver which belongs to her father, Russell Lumbert. On her way back to the window, Mrs. Evans said, she stumbled over a chair accidentally discharging the gun into her shoulder.

Sheriff's deputies who were called by R. B. Tallentire, a neighbor, arrived at the scene of the accident at 8:30 p. m. after Mrs. Evans had been taken to the hospital. They learned she had been alone in the house since her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Lumber, had left at 6:30 for the picture show.

Sheriff Frank Robinson today waiting Mrs. Evans' physician's permission to talk with her and complete his investigation of the case.

As Allied Forces Took Off To Invade Sicily





At top is a U. S. Army signal corps picture showing American troops being loaded aboard landing craft for the brilliant invasion of Sicily—the largest military operation of its kind ever attempted. Already Allied troops have captured 10 key Sicilian towns. Before long, Messina, (bottom photo) only two miles across the strait of Messina from the Italian mainland, may be the object of an allied assault.

B. And O. Derailment Wrecks Five Cars, Damages Overpass

Five cars of an eastbound Baltimore and Ohio work train were derailed shortly before noon today and piled into the supports of the overpass on Park avenue west at the city limits moving the entire bridge. No one was injured.

Cause of the accident was not immediately determined, but state highway patrolmen on the scene found part of a broken axle from one of the cars under the bridge. All traffic over the line was blocked.

State highway maintenance men who surveyed the damage declined comment. They said bridge inspectors would probably determine extent of the damage and safeness of the structure today.

All five cars, including a large crane were twisted into a mass of steel as they struck the south side of the structure tearing down poles and lines carrying western union circuits. About 100 feet of trackage was torn up.

Work crews were immediately dispatched to the scene and began clearing the single track right-of-way. The locomotive was uncoupled and proceeded to the Mansfield yards. Railroad officials were not available for comment.

DIES TRYING TO SAVE DOG

NORWALK —(AP)— Attempting to grab her dog from the path of a New York Central freight train, Mrs. Henriettta Cathergood, 75, of nearby Monroeville was ground to death last night beneath the locomotive's wheels, Coroner J. D. Bradish reported. The dog also was killed.

ADMIT SINKING

Nazis Say German U-Boat Sent Robin Moor To Bottom.

NEW YORK —(AP)— The Berlin radio acknowledged today that the American merchant ship Robin Moor, which was torpedoed and sunk in the South Atlantic on June 9, 1941, was sent to the bottom by a German submarine, CBS reported.

The Germans previously had disclaimed all responsibility for the sinking and had refused to consider a claim for damages lodged by the U. S. government.

The ship was the first American vessel to be torpedoed and sunk in this war.

All persons aboard the vessel eventually reached safety.

Judge Plans Conference With Chief On Delinquency Problem

Police Chief M. K. Bates' assertion that Mansfield's juvenile delinquency problem would be eased if county juvenile officers "would investigate some of the hang-outs of boys and girls of school age" brought the statement from Juvenile Judge S. H. Cramer today that he planned to hold a conference with the chief.

"I don't want to enter any controversy with the chief through the newspaper," the judge said, adding "I'm going to have a conference with the chief."

Chief Bates made his remarks after police arrested five schoolage youths who had staged a beer-drinking spree in the north end of the city. Two more were arrested Saturday night.

The chief said county officers "might look into the problem at night instead of being in such a hurry to get home at quitting time."

Judge Cramer said today he had asked city police to investigate several of the taverns reported to

DRIVE ON KURSK IN SECOND WEEK

Nazis Battle on Virtually Same Ground as When New Offensive Began.

MOSCOW — Field Marsshal Guenther Von Kluge's armored columns began the second week of the Kursk offensive today on much the same ground where it opened July 5.

After seven disastrous days of battle the Germans have succeeded only in minor gains with the loss of 2,500 tanks and 1,068 planes, according to Soviet operatioal communiques.

(The German radio in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press claimed that in the Belgorod area they had captured 28,000 Russian prisoners since July 5 and had captured or destroyed 1,640 tanks and 1,400 guns.)

There are few details available on the present situation in the Belgorod breach at the southern end of the 200-mile central front but the Russians have reported that they repelled a Nazi attack by more than 100 tanks including the new 60-ton Tigers. Red army artillery

TRUTH CATCHES UP WITH DRIVER

'Farmer' Hauled Gambling Resort Patrons, Board Finds.

AURORA, Ill.—(INS)—Due to the intervention of his rationing board, Clarence Schickler, 45, was forced today to get along without either his A or B gasoline ration book.

The board said it had learned that Schickler, who obtained the B book on the plea he needed it in the operation of a farm four miles south of Aurora, in fact was using it to haul gamblers from Aurora to out-lying resorts.

The board decided this hardly was an essential war industry and confiscated both the books.

COLUMBUS.—(U.P.)— Lieut. Col. Loren G. Windom, of Reynoldsburg, former assistant U. S. district attorney at Columbus, has been wounded in action in the South Pacific area, his wife said she had been informed by the war department today.

FINAL BATTLE FOR MUNDA DUE MOMENTARILY

American Soldiers and Marines Close In Steadily on Jap New Georgia Base.

PLANES BATTER ENEMY

Jap Naval Force Gives Up Its Attempt To Land Help as U. S. Planes Hit It.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)— American bombers, battering four Japanese cargo vessels apparently attempting to supply the enemy base at Kiska, sank one Japanese ship, left a second in a sinking condition, and badly damaged the other two in the group.

(By United Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Southwest Pacific — Thousands of American soldiers and marines closed in on Munda today and the Japanese airbase, cut off from supplies and subjected to an "1-day rain of bombs, was expected to fall within the week.

The final battle may start at any moment. Ground troops waited in the jungles just outside the Munda expense perimeter while Allied airplanes dropped ton after ton of explosives on the major Japanese New Georgia island stronghold.

Dauntless dive-bombers and avenger torpedo planes, continuing the South Pacific's biggest continuous aerial assault on a single objective, tore up the edge of the defenses Sunday when 52 tons of bombs were dropped on Bibelo Hill, 300 yards north of the eastern end of Munda airstrip.

Some 378,000 pounds of explosives have hit the enemy base since Friday.

A new force of Japanese cruisers and destroyers similar to that sunk early last week, was attacked by planes in Kula gulf between New Georgia and Kolombangara island to the north Saturday.

When last seen in bad weather, it was moving northward, evidently giving up an effort to reinforce the troops at Munda and Vila, on Kolombangara, by sea.

Frank Hewlett, United Press staff correspondent on Guadalcanal, said in a dispatch sent after Friday's record 70-ton attack on Munda that the Japanese may capitulate before next week-end. The fliers who participated in the raid doubted that much more

'QUIET DAY'

Stimson Rests In Britain; To See Churchill Later.

LONDON —(AP)— Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, who arrived here yesterday by plane from the United States, spent a quiet day today "getting acquainted with some of the American army officers and seeing a few other people," an announcement from his headquarters said.

Stimson was scheduled to meet later with Prime Minister Churchill for a conference on forthcoming moves against the Axis and also inspect American troops based on the British Isles.

Stimson's flight was broken by a stopover at Iceland, where he paused briefly to inspect United States troops and installations.

HELD FOR NAVY

Man Arrested at Bucyrus Was Wanted as Deserter.

UPPER SANDUSKY — (U.P.) — Roland R. Monroe, of nearby Nevada, wanted as a navy deserter, was held in the Wyandot county jail today following his arrest at Bucyrus while driving a car reporten stolen in Wyandot county.

Monroe enlisted last February and was stationed at the Little Creek, Va., amphibian base. Bucyrus police notified Wyandot county Sheriff Fred Jonas of Monroe's arrest.

British Eighth Army Races Up Eastern Coast

Americans Turn Back Seven Counter Attacks, Push Inland; Patton and Montgomery Lead Allied Invasion Forces.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—The Berlin radio declared today a total of seven British, American and Canadian divisions already had landed in Sicily. Giving this figure in a broadcast recorded by the Ministry of Information, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Transocean military commentator, asserted that "General Eisenhower undoubtedly can, if he desires, double the forces already landed."

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—A report from Bern, Switzerland, received here by way of Stockholm today quoted the Svensko Dagblodet as saying part of the Italian fleet had steamed out of La Specia, Italy, and that the people in Rome expect it to engage the Allied warships.

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British armies raced toward Catania from captured Syracuse in a tremendous push up Sicily's east coast today after American and Allied forces had captured nine other important ports and towns, turned back seven counterattacks by enemy tanks and captured 2,000 prisoners, mostly Italians.

Leading the western crescent of the Allied attack, Americans under Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., crushed the heaviest of the enemy armored counter-attacks in the Licata-Gela area some 80 miles west of Syracuse and advanced northward of Gela.

Heading units of his famous British Eighth Army, which fought in epic battles from El Alamein, Egypt, across North Africa, Gen. Montgomery plunged toward Messina and the strategic straits some 80 miles northward after securing firmly the advantageous

Anti-War Demonstrations Reported

LONDON—(INS)—Anti-war demonstrations occurred yesterday in various Italian cities and were "particularly serious" in Milan, Turin, Bologna and Florence, the Evening Star reported today.

port of Syracuse, a city of 53,000 and potential springboard for invasion of the Italian mainland.

(The Americans were holding a bridgehead 25 miles long and ten miles deep after taking Licata and Gela on the south coast, said a dispatch from the Allied command post by Edward Gilling, representing the combined British press. Their equipment already was being unloaded at these ports.

(Floridia, eight miles inland from Syracuse, already is in British hands, said another dispatch.)

Allied warplanes already were sweeping the skies from airfields captured in Sicily.

They had left Catania, the next objective of the British march, aflame, and they had dive-bombed columns of Axis troops being brought up for counterattacks.

Allied naval forces, unhampered by the Italian fleet, continued to pour men and supplies into the bridgeheads stretch for 100 miles along Sicily's southeastern coast for the rapid push up Sicily's eastern shore, and hurled shells into the enemy's communications and defenses.

Licata, 80 miles to the west on the south coast; Gela, Pachino, on Cape Passero at the extreme southeastern tip of the island; Avola and Noto, midway between Syracuse and Pachino; Puzzalo, site of an important air base on the south coast; Scoglitti, Ispica and Rosolini were among the captured places listed in today's Allied headquarters communique.

American troops in the Gela area beat off counter-attacks by the Italians' Fourth Livorno division and 45 tanks in the heaviest of all the seven enemy counter-blows.

The 54th Napoli division was driven out of Syracuse by the British—a lightning blow at the end of the second day of the Allied invasion which appeared to be a serious handicap to the enemy in bringing up reinforcements to meet a rapidly swelling penetration into the interior of the island.

The civilian population "seemed more pleased to see us than they had been to see the Huns," said one observer.

The swift occupation of the string of ports and towns along a 100-mile stretch of Sicily's southeastern coast was accompanied by a furious air action yesterday in which fleets of fast new American A-36 fighter-bombers smashed at least 400 enemy vehicles endeavoring to rush up troops and supplies for counter-attacks, and heavy blows by four-engineed and medium bombers at Catania, on the east coast, the Sicilian airdromes of Milo, Sciacca and Gerbini and two other airdromes at and near ABOARD U. S. INFANTRY LANDING BARGE, off the Sicilian coast, July 10.—(8:10 a. m.)—(Delayed)—Benito Mussolini's shore defenses crumbled with surprising rapidity as American troops swarmed onto the southeastern coast of Sicily before dawn today.

The initial landings were carried out under cover of a magnificent and spectacular bombardment by our warships.

I watched the first landings of this American unit from the bridge of the flagship of the supporting naval fleet. Then I boarded one of the infantry landing boats.

CHAPTER XX.

"Murmansk! Ah, to be sure! Well, I did not expect to be going back there quite so soon. But, God-be-thanked!, I had delivered my cargo—argicultural chemicals and hospital supplies from England—and was on the way back empty when the—the dirty Nazi pigs sent my ship to the bottom!" said Captain Eckhout.

"Well, it's a good job you'd delivered the stuff, anyway! But say—who's this other poor chap? He seems to be pretty badly used up!" Captain Elder inquired.

"He? Oh, he is one of my crew." He reached across to the other cot and shook the sailor.

"What's your name?" he asked, in Dutch.

"Anton Falck, Mihnheer."

"Can you speak English?"

"Yes, Captain."

"Well, speak it then. This gentleman is an American officer. What's your birthplace, Falck?"

"Haarlem, sir."

Elder patted him on the shoulder. "Okay, Falck—don't try to sit up. You stay right where you are until you feel better. Captain Eckhout, there's a cabin next to mine that I'm sure you'll be comfortable in."

"Ach, dear sir, you are too kind, too amiable!" said Captain Eckhout, effusively.

"Not at all, not at all! When you've rested a little, just ring for Jeff and he'll show you up to it."

The Dutchmen recovered in a day or so and then, with commendable spirit, proceeded to do whatever they could do to make themselves useful on the ship. Because neither Elder nor any of his officers were familiar with the North Cape waters, they were glad to avail themselves of Captain Eckhout's considerable knowledge. Falck, who had served in the Dutch navy, volunteered to stand regular lookout watch with the gun crew, thus replacing the dead Ahearn.

"Myself, I am taking what our English friends would call a busman's holiday," Eckhout explained. "This marvelous American ship — your modern American methods—all are to me a revelation! I am studying everything. Now, I go to the chart room, to learn what new wrinkles I can of the navigation."

"Fine!" said Elder. "Just continue to make yourself at home, Captain."

In the chart room, Eckhout was greeted by Mr. Blair. "Well, Captain, only four days more to Murmansk! That is, if the weather holds . . ."

"Ah, yes, the weather! In these latitudes, that is always the uncertain factor." The Dutchman considered the barometer, then the sky, and shrugged. "I would predict a storm," he said. "Perhaps later today." He leaned over the chart, on which the vessel's track was indicated by a line connecting a series of little pencilled crosses. "Does Captain Elder intend to hold to the present course?"

"Yes. He figures that the farther north we stay, the less chance there is of tangling with the Nazi planes from Petsamo."

"A very wise precaution," said Captain Eckhout. "But as for the weather—" he consulted the chronometer and set his wristwatch by it, "well, I am afraid it will be bad tonight."

And he was right. By seven o'clock, black clouds piled up on the northern horizon. By nine, a sleetladen gale set in, whipping the crests off the waves and driving them across the plunging Merchant Mariner in a blinding smother of spray.

Mr. Rossi turned to Captain Elder, who had joined him on the bridge, and shouted to make himself heard above the tumult of the storm. "Gosh, some night! First time it's been dark for two weeks!"

"Yes, and thank God for it! No need to worry about planes tonight—nor subs either, with the sea that's running. . . . Er, yes, Johnson? What is it?"

"Sparks is missing, sir!" announced the Assistant Operator, cupping his hands and leaning against the wind. "I went in to relieve him and he wasn't there."

"Hell! Have you searched the ship?"

"Yes, sir, we've been all over it. He just isn't aboard."

"D'you hear that, Joe?"

"Yes. Looks like he'd had another one of his crazy spells."

"And jumped overboard? Say, I'm afraid that's just what happened!" He peered out into the raging darkness and shook his head. "Well, Johnson, there's nothing we can do now. Get back on the job and we'll see what we can find out in the morning. Maybe he left a note or something."

But next day, when the storm had abated and Sparks' quarters were searched, no note or other evidence of premeditation was found. It was generally concluded that he had acted on a sudden, fear-crazed impulse. "He even had his pajamas layed out on his bunk, so he could hit the hay as soon as he came off watch," Parker reported, at breakfast. "I bet he tuned in that Hamburg Nazi again, got the wah-wahs listening to the 'death knell' and . . ." He made a grimace. "Well, the poor kid!"

"Ach, yes, it is a very sad business!" said Captain Eckhout, nodding grimly. "Not only do these accursed Nazis kill with torpedoes and bombs; they kill by destroying the mind. And against that sort of warfare there is no armor, no defense! None!"

"Well, yes, Captain. I think there is," said Elder. "The armor, the defense, is faith. Or at least, it saved a fellow countryman of yours at the bombing of Rotterdam." He repeated Captain Vanderhoven's story as he had heard it in Halifax, that night (was it a year, or could it be only a month ago?) before the convoy sailed. "And so," he concluded. "And so, when the bomb struck his home, poor Vanderhoven had nothing left. Nothing that is, except his reason, and a faith strong enough to protect it. In a word, he had God."

Captain Eckhout, who had listened intently, inclined his head "I respect your friend," he said "I, too, was in Rotterdam that day, and even for me, who suffered no personal calamity, it was an ordeal almost to shatter the mind. Ach! Never was a more savage atrocity committed in all the history of the world! With my own eyes, I saw the white rockets shoot up in token of surrender — and one minute, two minutes later, there came the Stukas screaming! And the bombs! Ach, the bombs!" He covered his face with his hands and swayed slowly back and forth. Then, recovering himself. "Pray forgive me, gentlemen! The memory of that—that awful day will be with me always!" He rose, bowed stiffly and left the room.

JAP DOCTORS IN U. S. ARMY

American-Born Nipponese Want To Prove Their Loyalty To Nation.

(By International News Service)

CARLISLE BARRACKS, Pa.—American-born Japanese will remember Pearl Harbor "long after the other Americans have forgotten it," according to three U S army officers of Japanese ancestry.

The three termed the attack on Pearl Harbor "a worse stab in the back for us than for the other American citizens."

The officers are physicians commissioned in the medical corps

They are Lieuts. California S. Ushiro of Los Altos, Cal.; Norman Kobayoshi of Gardena, Cal., and Katsumi Nakadate of East Chicago, Ind. All are students in the 28th Officers' class at the Medical Field Service school, Carlisle Barracks.

Kobayoshi and Ushiro spent several months in Japan "a few years ago" but Nakadate has never been in the land of the Rising Sun "and never wants to go there." Ushiro has a brother, Master Sgt. Arthur K Ushiro serving with the American forces "somewhere in the Pacific"

"This is really the first opportunity we American-born Japanese have had to prove ourselves to be loyal American citizens," said one of them.

"We have suffered many indignities since the war broke out," he added "Nevertheless, we are more than anxious to do all we can for the United States"

Nakadate's father and a brother are believed to be interned in Japan because he has not heard from either of them for the past three years. An army reserve officer, he was a member of the East Chicago draft board before being called up

The three officers will graduate this month with several hundred medical department officers and will report immediately to Camp Shelby, Miss, for active duty

FOR MEATLESS MEALS

LOS ANGELES, Cal —(U P)— For the benefit of nutrition-conscious housewives, Southern California experts have suggested the following substitutes for beef on meatless days; baked beans, corn muffins, green vegetables, cabbage salad with nuts, fruit and milk. These are guaranteed to provide the requisite protein, minerals and vitamins.

COSTS $153,000 A MINUTE

SCRANTON, Pa. —(U P)— Global war is costing the United States $220,000,000 daily or $153,000 every minute, according to Dudley Atherton, prominent banker. Atherton said government war expenditures up to the end of 1942 totaled $103,000,000,000 as contrasted with the peak prewar total debt of $26,596,000,000

SPONGES SCARCE BECAUSE OF DIVERSION TO WAR USE

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Sponges, best known for household uses, have been absorbed into the war program, according to Harold L. Ickes, coordinator of fisheries.

"Extreme scarcity of sponges for civilians needs is due to the fact that what sponges are available are being diverted largely to military use," Ickes declared.

"The present scarcity of sponges is due to several causes," Ickes pointed out. "The most important single cause is the scarcity of experienced fishermen.

"The backbone of the Florida sponge industry is the fishery conducted by divers, who take high-grade sponges at depths up to 100 feet. The skill and experience of these divers are so useful to the navy that the industry has lost large numbers of irreplaceable men."

Another sponge shortage cause, he continued, is "coast guard restrictions on the movement of vessels.

"Coast guard regulations imposed in November, 1942, requiring vessels to return to port each night, seriously handicapped the sponge industry. Divers ordinarily remain at sea 30 days or more, and the necessity of running to and from the sponge grounds each day left little time for fishing"

Although these regulations were slightly relaxed on January 30, sponge boats still must come in for the night to coast guard anchorages nearest the grounds they are working.

Finally, the Bahama Islands imports declined almost to the vanishing point after 1939, when a disease of unidentified origin destroyed most of the sponges there.

"Loss of these imports and wartime interference with shipments from such distant places as Australia have further reduced the quantities of sponges available in American markets," Ickes said

"The shortage of sponges has just begun to be felt seriously," it was explained.

There are, however, several other types of sponges. The most popular ones used, besides the plant sponge referred to, are cellulose sponges and loofa sponges.

The loofa sponge is made from the white fibre surrounding the seeds of a Mexican vegetable, which is a green gourd with a sponge like interior.

Sponges now are serving a variety of wartime purposes on all the fronts, proving equally valuable for surgical operations as well as the cleaning of many instruments and machines of war.

PIKE'S PEAK TRAVEL OFF

IT'S GREAT TO HAVE A 'PHONE!

They've Got What it Takes!

You can take it from men who fly 'em—from Republic Aviation Corporation's chief test pilot Joe Parker (below, right) and the young fighter pilots with him: these new Thunderbolt fighters, the Army P-47's, they've got what it takes! And when you've wrestled one of these babies out of a screaming power-dive, you've earned a Camel. For Camels it is, with Joe Parker...with men in all the services.

THE PLANES

◆ They may not be what the doctor ordered for a quiet ride, but this hard-hitting new Thunderbolt fighter plane, built by Republic Aviation, is what the Axis asked for—and is going to get!

◆ What's it feel like? "Well," says Joe Parker (at far right), who tests these Thunderbolts, "when you're diving that fast, you feel like you were a part of a solid piece of steel. And when it's over, I sure enjoy a Camel."

THE MEN WHO FLY 'EM

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

ADVANCED BASE IN NORTH AFRICA—(By Wireless)—A new record in this theater was set a few days ago when one Flying Fortress brought down 13 Nazi planes. One gunner alone shot down seven.

Such feats continued to increase the prestige of the Fortress and cause its early champions to feel vindicated against the criticisms which were heard earlier in the war. On a recent raid a Fortress which fell behind because of damage to one of its engines was pounced on by 15 German fighters. The Fortress fought off the whole 15, knocked down five, and escaped.

Clapper

The steady advance in air superiority by the Allies probably is the result not only of the larger Allied production but also of a fundamental mistake in the German conception of air war. While the Americans concentrated on the thoroughly-armed Fortress which has telling offensive power, the Germans were putting their best efforts into fighters instead of bombers. The fighter is a defensive weapon. The bomber is what carries the war to the enemy. At the same time, as the Americans have demonstrated, it can become a powerful means of destroying an enemy fighter force.

Evidently the Germans considered bombing more for its effect on the morale of the enemy than as a military weapon. To the Germans the bomber was an instrument for terrorizing civilian populations rather than, as the Americans conceive it, an instrument for hitting a military target whether it be an enemy aircraft engine factory, a waterworks, a railroad freight yards or any other specific military objective.

Against helpless people and helpless communities such as Warsaw and Rotterdam the Germans were able to bomb the cities into a shambles and drive the people out in panic. But Allied airmen consider the German bombing of London was stupid. The target was too large and in spite of severe damage in spots there just was too much of London to destroy it from the air. The net effect of the destruction was minor and London was in no sense made uninhabitable.

Neither did the Germans induce terror and panic but rather the reverse, for the population of London steadily improved its methods of fire fighting and otherwise protecting the city. American airmen who are the developers of precision bombing believe that the Germans might have come close to knocking out England if they ignored London and concentrated on the aircraft factories making Spitfires. As it was, the British were able to build up fighter forces that made it too costly for the Germans to persist in mass bombing.

All of this is considered by airmen whom I talked with in England and here to carry a lesson for our side, namely, that we must destroy the German fighter force because it constitutes the first real hurdle to victory. Tunisia went fast when the Germans lost control of the air. The daily losses of German fighters now probably will have the greatest bearing on the future course of the war.

In raids over France and Germany the Fortress is becoming as important as a destroyer of German fighters as for bombing and this use of Fortresses may well be exploited to hasten the end of the German air force.

Germany placed Great faith in air warfare and the fact that she is losing is not because the air does not have value but because the Germans, in spite of pioneering, did not understand the use of it in the sense that the Americans and British do. Our use of bombers plus the overwhelming advantage in production on our side means most certainly that the day is to come when Germany is out of the air.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—This is nothing on the order of a beef, you understand, but just an innocent, wholesome explanation or speculation having to do with our lack of cruising radius here in these eastern states where they measure out the gas with an eyedropper and people, when they do venture on the road, go turtling along at 25 miles an hour and cut her off entirely and coast on the hills to stretch their mileage.

Pegler

People aren't sore about this, but they are slowly going nuts, not because of the inconvenience of limited and cramped transportation for necessary travel, but from a suppressed longing to sling the old lady and the kids, if any, into that moping old buggy, so mournful and silent there in the shed, and just go for a summer night's drive. I imagine that our feelings along the eastern seaboard are something like those of the undergrads in Sing Sing when they see the night boats chugging past in the Hudson, turning cool white feathers off their bows or hear trains growling through the tunnel.

There she sets, in the garage, the old car, still pretty good in the treads but going stable-crazy like a barned-up steed for lack of a pleasant run to nowhere in particular in the cool of the evening, a sweet refreshing tankful of ethyl at one of those high-toned filling stations, now going to dust and weeds, a breather in the parking space while the family takes on a few scoops of beer with chaser-o-rye and go home and back to the stall.

We may not have realized as much but almost all of us had become addicts of motion for its own sake in the years since the other war as the roads grew smoother and the engines and tires almost infallible. Riding in the car was one of our simple, necessary relaxations and, as this second summer of rationing drags along on much smaller allowances and with driving for pleasure strictly verboten under penalty of gossip, scandal, embarrassment and possible revocation of the ticket, our people are beginning to chew bits of paper and gaze off into space.

The enforcement may have something to do with this nervousness. If you have a ticket you may take a vacation trip if you can convince your neighbors on the board that no train or bus can take you where you want to go, provided you can get the gas. Or, going to the store to lay in a loaf of bread and some cigarets, some strangers may up and ask you whither away and you feel compelled to tell him that's your business and what is this, anyway, the Gestapo?

But I still don't think that is our main trouble now. Our trouble is that it has been so long since we could step on that starter, back her out, whip her around and head her away just following the roads for maybe 40 or 50 miles on no business whatever, but just to be moving and going and with no explanations or lies to anybody.

Nobody around these parts has done anything like that for a year, and I have noticed that some public officials who have legitimate errands of more than 10 miles nowadays pack the loved ones along to let them review old scenes and breathe some of that country air and somehow look more like Sanger's circus or Gypsy John Mitchell and family than dignitaries of state.

We here may not realize it and the people in the middle west, the west and south just can't get the idea, not having been through the experience, but after a while, like those boys in Sing Sing you begin to pine for a glimpse of an ordinary crossroads over the ridge or the bouquet of Joe's lunch on the Post road, 30 miles away.

I think the people of the east have been very game and sportsmanlike about it all. Although some necessary mystery is made of the reason why, there is general acceptance of the proposition that the gas that we don't get is going to Europe and Africa. If there were some way to drain off a little from, say Illinois and Indiana, to raise our all average, that would be real nice, of course, but where has shown that it can be done and, in the absence of proof that it can, probably it can't.

It isn't anger or annoyance that is getting us down around here. We are just going stir-crazy that's all.

You Meet Such Interesting People.
(And It's the Little Things About Them That Intrigue You.)

ONE of the best acts in the Ziegfeld Follies is composed of Bil and Cora Baird and their amusing little puppets. Few people even those in show business, know that the marionettes were fashioned out of four old grand pianos which Bil bought three years ago for two dollars apiece.

Since he became an American citizen, Charles Boyer likes his close friends to call him "Chuck" because it sounds so Yankee. (Doesn't sound very glamorous though does it?)

When Fred Allen attends a session at the noisy 18 club he always takes a rear table. The long walk to the floor when he's called on to say a few words gives him time to think up ad libs he says.

Tony De Marco, the dancer, owns 200 pairs of shoes. He is saving a couple of pair—relics of his early days as a terpsichorean sensation — to have gold plated and kept as souvenirs.

Every time Irish Morton Downer meets Henry Wallace, the vice-president puts in a request for the tenor to croon his favorite "Amour," which Irish Downey sings in Spanish.

Jed Harris never tells his secretary where he is going or where he can be reached later, because he has a passion for being unavailable. He has another passion—rummaging around odd-pants shops, where he buys trousers to go with his odd coats.

Alan Mowbray doesn't like himself on the screen and boasts that he hasn't seen a Mowbray opus in eight years.

Eric Hatch, who wrote "My Man Godfrey," is now what is known as a "music annotator" on the air. But in the course of his colorful past he's been everything from a jockey to a broker to a brakeman on a freight train.

Milton Berle is an exception to the Broadway rule that comedians hate comedians. His favorite actors are funny men—he'll travel overnight to hear George Jessel, fall under a ringside table laughing at Joe E. Lewis perform on a cafe floor, and give up an evening of billiards (his pet diversion) to listen to Fred Allen.

Jane Pickens owns a half interest in a beauty salon in her native Macon, Ga. . . . Ben Hecht's working hours usually run from 7 a. m. to noon when he's tapping out a deathless piece on the typewriter, but he doesn't like to change from pajamas to street clothes under the p. m. hours.

SENATORS MEET WITH JONES ON WHEAT TANGLE

Midwestern Group Calls For Boost In Price, Says It's Now Below Parity.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Ten wheat state senators, led by Sen. Clyde Reed (R) Kan., today met with War Food Administrator Marvin Jones, Economic Stabilization Director Fred Vinson and Director of War Mobilization James Byrnes in an effort to solve the tangled wheat problem.

Seriously alarmed over less-than-parity prices for wheat, created by recent house action withdrawing soil conservation and parity payments for the grain, the senators are demanding a boost in the price ceiling on flour.

The government has asked wheat farmers to plant 70,000,000 acres of wheat in 1944—18,000,000 acres above the 1943 planting.

But, say the senators, any farmer "would be foolish" to plant more wheat when he "is a long way from being assured of parity price."

Meanwhile, Reed points out that the expected July 1, 1944 carryover of 184,524,000 bushels of wheat "is a dangerously short reserve in time of war."

"As the shortage of other foods becomes more pronounced," Reed said, "more and more reliance must be placed upon wheat.

"If our obligations to other countries are to be met, abundant supplies must be provided. A reserve of only 185,000,000 bushels, with the possibility of a short crop next year, is a matter of anxiety."

Reed blasted the OPA for "preserving a sub-normal price of bread at its present level" by fixing "an artificially low ceiling on flour which in turn holds the market price of wheat at a point about 21 cents below parity."

So long as the farmer received a parity payment which amounts to about 13 cents a bushel plus an average of about nine cents a bushel for soil conservation payments, the wheat grower got along all right, Reed said.

SERIOUSLY HURT IN GARDEN ROW

Clevelander's Skull Fractured In Fight Over Location of Tomato Plants.

(By International News Service)

CLEVELAND—The tomatoes of a Victory garden Saturday set off a violent neighborhood quarrel which resulted in one participant being in a Cleveland hospital today with a fractured skull and the other under questioning by police.

James V. Carroll, 47, was in fair condition at St. John's hospital where he was taken after a dispute with Thaddeus M. Phillips, 44, his next door neighbor.

The quarrel, culmination of a long feud between the two families, was motivated by Phillips' assertion that Carroll's tomato plants extended six feet onto his property.

Phillips was to report to police today for further investigation after stories told by himself and Mrs. Carroll, who witnessed the fight, differed.

Questioned after the fight, Phillips said he committed the act in self-defense after Carroll threatened him with a spade and trowel. Mrs. Carroll told police that Phillips struck her husband with a hedge shears, knocked him to the ground, jumped on him and continued hitting him after warning him to move the tomato plants.

Mansfielders have until next Thursday, July 15, to make application for the renewal of their "A" gas ration books, Charles C. Beelman, chairman of the ration board, said today. He issued the warning to motorists that applications which are not received by July 15 will not be accepted until after July 21. So you'll have to hurry if you don't want to get stranded on that date with your old book invalid and no book to buy gasoline.

The bomber which flew low over the city Sunday evening around 7 was believed to be piloted by a friend of the L. G. Howell family, 303 West Fifth street. The bomber circled the city several times and dipped low in the vicinity of the Howell home. In a previous flight over the city, the pilot had circled above the Howell home and later sent a telegram stating that he had been over here.

Most everybody has been having troubles with tires during these days of rationing and shortages but nothing compared to the predicament a senator passing through Mansfield found himself. Senator Abe Murdock of Utah, driving home from Washington, D. C., had a tire go bad for him with no spare to replace it. First the senator put in a call to the ration board and made an appointment to see the officials there. He's now waiting to hear their decision about allowing him a new tire.

RENEWS DEMAND FOR MARINE GAS

Ohio Representative Insists Supply's Plentiful For Lake Erie Boatsmen.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Rep. Alvin F. Weichel (R) Ohio, today renewed his demands that the petroleum administrator for war release more gasoline for motor boats on Lake Erie.

In a letter to Deputy PAW Chief Ralph K. Davies, Weichel pointed out that there is "an abundance of gasoline" along lower Lake Erie and added that there is no question of use of rubber involved.

Weichel's latest attempts to secure gas for pleasure craft on Lake Erie followed an earlier letter from Davies in which he said the matter "was being given careful consideration."

Previously Weichel said he had been practically assured that the gasoline would be granted but that move was stymied by the restriction of pleasure driving along the eastern seaboard.

"There is an abundance of gasoline in the immediate vicinity both at the water's edge and at refineries within a few miles of Lake Erie," Weichel wrote to Davies. "None of these require use of rubber, tank cars or transport trucks, all being handled by local transportation."

The Ohio congressman also pointed out that many of the pleasure craft are used for fishing "which adds, certainly, to the food supply."

PLANE CARRYING OAKES' BODY TO U.S. TURNS BACK

Body Returned For Autopsy at Nassau; Son-in-Law To Be Arraigned Today.

(By International News Service)

NASSAU, Bahamas—As a legal battle loomed on the admissibility of fingerprints as evidence, Alfred De Marigny was to be arraigned today in connection with the murder of his multi-millionaire father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes.

A new and sensational turn of events developed in the mystery yesterday when a plane carrying Sir Harry's body to Miami was recalled and the remains returned to the autopsy room of the Nassau hospital.

A coroner's hearing, which was held last week soon after the American-born baronet's body was found in his Nassau home, reported that Sir Harry was bludgeoned to death. His body, it added, was found in a bed which had been partially burned before an electric fan extinguished the fire.

The inquest is scheduled to be resumed tomorrow, but whether re-examination of the body is planned was not immediately made known.

Marigny, who married Sir Harry's oldest daughter, Nancy, 18, about a year ago reportedly against her father's wishes, denied having been in the Oakes' home in the last year.

However, American detectives summoned by the Duke of Windsor as governor of Nassau declared the residence was "full" of fingerprints allegedly corresponding to Marigny's.

On this point hinges the possibility of a legal battle over admissibility of such evidence.

The supreme court of the islands never has ruled on the admissability of fingerprint evidence, authorities pointed out, although there have been two recent convictions in Nassau magistrate's court on the basis of such evidence.

Marigny, a native of the British Indian ocean island of Mauritius where he sometimes went under the title of "count," is accused of having a bitter quarrel with his father-in-law just a week before the tragedy.

Police charged that Marigny failed to explain burns which he allegedly suffered on one hand, as well as why his newly-grown Van Dyke beard showed signs of being singed.

Glamour Goes Truckin'

LOOKING PRETTY FOR THE CAMERA

STILL PRETTY IN OVERALLS

Twenty-year-old model Lulu V. Parker may have tossed glamour to the winds when she decided to become a truck driver at the Miami air depot in Hialeah, but she's probably the best looking decoration on any truck for miles around. When the former Detroit model was turned down for the WAC's because she was under-age, she decided she still wanted to do something more useful than looking pretty for the cameras at $5 an hour. Although she never drove anything heavier than a passenger car before now, Lulu has no trouble with complicated big G. I. vehicles, and manipulates heavy command and reconnaissance cars easily.

MISS MARY ARNETT TO WED SGT. HAWLEY

Parents of Bride-Elect Announce Engagement and Approaching Marriage at Party for Friends and Relatives.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES A. ARNETT, 61 West Arch street, are announcing the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Mary Arnett, to Sgt. Robert Hawley, Camp Davis, N. C., son of Mrs. Ethel Hawley, 59½ West Fifth street.

Friends learned of the betrothal at a party given this past week-end at the home of the bride-elect's parents. Bridge was the diversion for the guests and early in the evening little Roberta Weil, niece of Miss Arnett, presented the guests with dainty Colonial corsages. From each bouquet hung two ribbons on which were the names "Mary and Bob."

Prizes for the games were awarded to Mrs. Hawley, Mrs. Fred Stecker, Mrs. Richard Taylor and Miss Marjorie Balbaugh.

The young couple has not set a date for the wedding, as the nuptial day will depend on the time of furlough granted to Sgt. Hawley next month. The ceremony will be an open church event at the First Lutheran church.

Miss Arnett is now employed at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company. Before his induction Sgt. Hawley was also employed at the Westinghouse. Both are graduates of the Mansfield Senior high school.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

"PENALTY CARDS" LAWS

In addition to cards which become "penalty cards" because of infractions of other regulations, the new Laws of Contract Bridge provide that if a defender does any of these things: (a) drops a card face on the table; (b) drops a card simultaneously with one led or played, or plays a second card to a trick; (c) plays before declarer has named or exacted a lead or play penalty for a previous irregularity; (d) sees the face of a card belonging to his partner (except following a claim or concession of tricks by the declarer); (e) plays to declarer's lead out of turn after declarer has been required to correct it, or (f) plays another card when obligated to play a penalty card, any such card becomes a "penalty card." (If the defenders lead simultaneously, the correct lead stands; if a defender leads or plays two or more cards simultaneously, he may play either card, the other card or cards becoming "penalty cards.")

Here is what must be done with a "penalty card":

1. A defender must leave his penalty card face up on the table. If he improperly picks it up, and if declarer fails to call attention to the error before thereafter playing from both hands, declarer is deemed to have condoned the original offense.

2. A penalty card must be played at the first legal opportunity, whether in leading, following suit, discarding or trumping. This obligation continues until the card is played, or until declarer nullifies it by selecting the option given in the next paragraph. If a defender can play either of two (or more) penalty cards, declarer may designate which one is to be played.

3 If an ace, king, queen or jack becomes a penalty card, and still is unplayed when first thereafter it is the turn of the owner's partner to lead, declarer may forbid the lead of the suit of that card, in which case the penalty card ceases to be a penalty card and may be picked up. Declarer may not enforce this option after the owner's partner has led unless he has previously advised that he was contemplating such action.

When a defender incurs two or more obligations, he must fulfill them in this order of preference: First, follow suit to a lead if able, this obligation over-riding all other requirements; second, respond, if able, and as directed by declarer, to a proper lead or play penalty (if he has an unplayed penalty card and if the lead or play penalty cannot be satisfied by playing the penalty card, he must play it at the next legal opportunity); third, he must play a penalty card, if able.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

There was such cold venom in the sneering voice of Ruth Hayes, that a little shiver rippled over me. But Dicky wasn't shivering. He had sprung to his feet, and was towering above the "wilderness Woman," who, for all her bravado, now shrank away from him, pressing as far back as she could against her chair cushions.

"I'd hate to gag a woman—even you!" he said, and his voice scorched her. "I don't care how much you interrupt me, but by the eternal, if you take my wife's name or Katharine Bickett's in vain again with one of your scurrilous speeches, I'll truss that mouth of yours up in a way that you'll remember for the rest of your natural life, whether you're in jail or out!"

"There's a very old saying," he went on, suddenly shifting from fury to a conversational tone, "which speaks of a woman whose shoe some other person is not worthy to unloose. For your information — and edification — I'm going to tell you now, that in my estimation and Jack Bickett's, his wife and mine belong in that category, while you head the list of the dames who aren't qualified to do any shoe untying."

"Speak for yourself, Pipsqueak! Jack Bickett doesn't share your high-flown sentiments. You can bank on that."

"Then he's an awful liar," Dicky said, with apparent good humor. "When I last saw him, a few days ago, 'them were his sentiments,' just the same as mine."

I echoed her gasp of astonishment, but for a different reason. Had my husband gone out of his mind, that he should admit to this dangerous woman that he had seen Jack? Then I reflected that Dicky invariably knew what he was doing, and waited for the explanation.

"I knew it!" Ruth Hayes exploded the next instant. "You double-crossing crooks! All of you know where Jack Bickett is, and don't you ever believe I'm not going to find out!"

"Such optimism!" Dicky gently mocked. "But let me put you right on one score. This is a strictly masculine secret. Neither Mrs. Graham nor Mrs. Bickett have the slightest idea of Jack's whereabouts. It is too dangerous a bit of knowledge for them to possess. I mean for them, not for the existence of the secret. They are models of discretion, but we do not intend that they shall be placed in any possible danger by their possession of the secret."

"Poppycock!" she stormed. "You don't expect me to believe that, do you?"

"There you have the one outstanding feature of our little talk together," Dicky said. "I am being very much amused. So I think I'll tell you some of the things Jack Bickett said about you."

I pricked up my ears. Jack had slid over the question of how personal had been Ruth's interest in him. Was it possible that he had confided to Dicky, another man, things which he had kept from me and would not tell Katharine?

"The least of his counts against you," Dicky was beginning, "is the fact that you betrayed your brother's confidence in you, and by drugging Jack on your last night in camp, stole—from him what you believed to be the key to his secret plans. As of course you have discovered by now, you did not get the key paper, did not ruin the result of his years of research, as you had hoped, and have nothing of value to pass on to your superiors."

He paused, then launched another taunt.

"Sort of a pin-pricked balloon, your revenge, isn't it?"

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

Golf is a humblin' game. And so my friend Johnny Burns finds it. That's Lt. John V. Burns, who just a couple years ago was managing Mansfield Athletic Supply teams, and finishing third in the Richland county open golf tournament.

He also finds that swearing off of golf is like going on the wagon. There's such an awful thud when you fall off. But let John tell it.

Dear Rex: I have been reading your column with interest every time the News-Journal comes through, and depend on your quips to keep me posted with doings of former Mansfield athletes in service.

You know, it seems as though every time I have a tale of woe to tell, it concerns something that happened to me on the golf course.

My last sad story was the first week in February when I swore off for the duration.

I remained true to my vows, and hadn't touched a club since then, until I weakened and entered the service championship tournament last week. Couldn't figure out what was happening in the morning, because after such a long lay-off I was playing as well as I have ever played. Everything went right, and I came in with a 37-38—75, just one stroke out of the lead at noon.

It happened on the second hole in the afternoon, a dogleg to the right, par four hole, with jungle at the bend. I cut it a little too close and some of those big weeds rared up and grabbed my shot. I finally made the green in six and was down in eight.

History repeated itself on the next hole, more jungle, and a seven on a par four hole. Just to rub it in, I three-putted the following green. I posted a beautiful 47 for the nine, then finished the back nine in 38 again, which made me all the madder.

* * *

I think I wound up in about ninth or tenth position. Yep—I'm off again for the duration.

I had a lot of fun handling a softball team last month, which was undefeated in army play. Right now I am handling our battery football and basketball teams, and it seems funny to have these two sports in season at the same time.

Our basketball team lost an early game to a navy team, but since then we have been knocking off all the regiments and have yet to lose to an army team.

It is hard to play fast break down here all the time, so I taught the boys one of Russ Murphy's old set offenses and it has been working swell. I think I am in better shape than I have ever been. Must be the regular hours and good food. You'd be surprised how the climate slows you down, though.

Had a reunion with Lts. Dave McGinty and Harley Whitemore the other day. Corp Jimmy Fullager, Pvts John Columbus and Sam Martino are also here. I haven't been able to locate anyone else from home

I'm glad to see they are managing to keep softball alive this summer. Was certainly glad to see that Tappans got an Army and Navy "E" and it was also nice for Hughes-Keenan and Westinghouse. Certainly speaks well for one great little town. My best to everyone.

Johnny Burns.

Dodds Quits As Two-Mile Runner

LOS ANGELES —(UP)— Gunder Haegg, holding a new American two-mile record, was enroute to San Francisco today planning to break his own new mark.

With Haegg on the train trip north was Gil Dodds, Boston university divinity student who trailed him 100 yards in the record-breaking race Saturday. Dodds will meet Haegg Saturday in the two-miler at San Francisco. The Swedish ace earlier had planned to concentrate on a world one-mile mark at San Francisco, but changed his mind before boarding the train.

* * *

"I haven't had time to develop the speed for the mile," he said.

Disappointed, Dodds said his two-mile appearance Saturday against Haegg would be his last for that distance.

"I'd certainly like to run the mile against him," Dodds said.

Lippy Leo Believed Slipping

Boot Clean Off as Aftermath of Strike.

By TED MEIER

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

LEO "LIPPY" DUROCHER apparently is on the way out as manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers as the aftermath of the revolt against his leadership that startled the baseball world Saturday.

While on-the-surface peace reigned today in this latest Ebbets field episode, involving the three-day suspension of star Pitcher Bobo Newsom for what Durocher termed "insubordination," the sentiment of the players was reliably reported to be that they are "sick of being second guessed" and that future flareups can be expected unless Durocher succeeds in restoring harmony. New York baseball writers agreed that "there are strong reasons to believe Leo will not last the season as manager."

These developments overshadowed yesterday's furious action on the diamond that saw the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Yankees sweep doubleheaders from the Boston Braves and Chicago White Sox to widen their leads to 5½ and 4½ games, respectively.

The onrushing Cardinals chalked up their sixth in a row and their 13th triumph in 15 starts as Harry Gumbert blanked the Braves, 3 to 0, and Whitey Kurowski doubled with the bases full in the 11th inning for a 9 to 6 conquest in the nightcap.

The Yankees likewise wound up their western invasion in fine style by making it four straight over the White Sox and their ninth win in 11 starts. The scores were 9-0 and 8-6.

Milo Candini suffered his first defeat in eight starts for Washington when Cleveland knocked him out in the first inning and went on to a 5 to 1 victory. The Senators, however, gained a split for the day by winning the second game, 6 to 4, in 10 innings.

Detroit and the Philadelphia Athletics also split a twin bill. Rookie Don Black of the A's beat the Tigers, 4 to 3, in the opener and the veteran Tommy Bridges twirled a brilliant three-hit shutout to gain a 9-0 triumph for the Tigers in the nightcap.

Behind the seven-hit pitching of Bucky Walters and Ray Starr, Cincinnati beat the slumping Phillies twice, 7 to 4 and 14 to 2.

The St. Louis Browns took both ends of their bargain bill from the Boston Red Sox, 8 to 7, in 12 innings and 4 to 2.

The Chicago Cubs and New York Giants divided their second successive doubleheader. Ernie Lombardi's 10th inning homer won the first for the Giants, 4 to 3. Bill Nicholson's seventh inning homer with one on gave the Cubs the second by the same score.

Pittsburgh beat Brooklyn 3 to 2 but the Dodgers came back to win the nightcap, 5 to 4.

Arky Vaughan, third baseman who asserted that Newsom's suspension was unjust and turned in his uniform Saturday, then relented after a conference with President Branch Rickey, played in both games, getting three hits in seven times at bat.

Zivic, Lamotta Battle Again

PITTSBURGH —(UP)— Fritzie Zivic, former welterweight champion, and Joltin' Jake Lamotta, the perpetual motion man from the Bronx, meet again in a 15-round bout at Forbes field tonight to settle once and for all the question as to who is the better boxer.

* * *

Jake, who has just turned 21, nine years younger than the ex-champ, will have youth, speed, weight and endurance in his favor and that counts among the wise money boys who have installed him a 7 to 5 favorite.

But the odds don't worry Zivic. And apparently the extra distance—the last fight was only 10 rounds — isn't bothering him either. "He's made to order for me," Fritz said.

Last time the two fought, Lamotta was given a widely-disputed decision, to the chagrin of a crowd of nearly 15,000 who cheered Zivic at the close of the fight and remained to boo after the decision was announced.

WANTS POST-WAR FRESHMEN BANNED

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — (AP) — Carl Marvin Voyles, director of athletic at the College of William and Mary, thinks that the Southern Conference should return to its rule barring freshmen from varsity competition in athletics after the war.

"The schools that played freshmen last year found that these boys suffered academically a great deal," Voyles said. "It is a trying time for high school and prep school boys to adjust themselves in college in normal times, and even more so in war times."

WAITING FOR BUMP

SUFFOLK, Va. — (AP) — This could be called another one of those fish stories—but to be exact, it's really about a bird that eats fish. A Florence, S. C., fish truck passing through Suffolk recently, was accompanied by a large heron, which flew low over the truck and flapped along at an estimated 25-mile-per-hour clip.

PARTENHEIMER HURLS NO-HIT VICTORY

Mansfield southpaw hurler Stan Partenheimer, who had a tryout with Louisville this spring after pitching for Wooster college, was definitely on the beam yesterday as he turned in his fourth straight victory for Fort Hayes—a no-hit, no-run 10 to 0 shutout.

Partenheimer struck out 14, had two assists and one putout, and the opposition hit only two balls to the infield and none to the outfield. And he starred on the attack with three hits in as many trips to the platter. Altogether it was a big day. He walked one batter.

Sell-Out Seen For All-Stars

Crowd of 32,480 Can Be Seated at Philly.

By SID FEDER

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — The major league moguls must have had at least a swami or a ouija board handy when they decided, six months ago, to put the all-star game in Philadelphia this year.

* * *

It was at their winter powwow that the club owners sent the inter-league lawn party here, although technically the game wasn't slated for the east this year. It comes off tomorrow in Shibe park, and it's probably the luckiest decision the magnates have made since pop bottles were barred for throwing purposes at umpires.

* * *

For when the Nationals and Americans start shooting at 9 p. m. (EWT), it looks as if every one of the 32,480 seats will be full of customers and the S. R. O. sign will be out.

The flight of the "Phantastic" Phillies and the surge of the Athletics, brief as it was, have brought the fans out.

As for the game itself, early arrivals were giving the National league bandwagon a real hayride, pointing out that the senior circuit was sporting more pitching and, what is even rarer, more power. Still, the betting commissioners have installed the American leaguers 5 to 6 favorites to make it eight out of 11 in these shindigs.

The July meeting of the hot-stove set argued most over whether Billy Southworth would start his St. Louis Cardinal ace, Mort Cooper again, for the National league or would give his southpaw specialist, Howie Pollet, a crack at opening the fireworks.

Some of the sitters pointed out that Cooper rated a chance to get "hunk" for the way the Americans sewed up the game with two homers in the first inning last year. The rest maintained that since Pollet is due to go into the air corps Thursday, Billy the Kid would let him start this one as a final fling.

* * *

Spud Chandler, the one-time Georgia footballer, was due to open for the Americans, but he served up a full nine-inning "meal" yesterday, and it was believed Joe McCarthy might go to his other Yankee star, Tiny Bonham.

Luke Backs Down On Umpire Charge

ST LOUIS—(UP)—There never was any question in his mind about the honesty or integrity of American League umpires, Manager Luke Sewell of the St. Louis Browns said today.

Sewell's statement resulted from a story last week in which he accused the arbiters of favoring the New York Yankees. His remarks brought protests from Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees and started an investigation of the story by league president Will Harridge.

"There was no thought in my mind, nor did I intend to infer, that the honesty or integrity of the umpires was being questioned," Sewell said.

* * *

"In any discussion with anyone about American League umpires, that opinion has always remained uppermost. I sincerely believe every decision they make is an honest one, and if anyone has interpreted these conversations differently, I am truly sorry for it was certainly not in my mind to discredit any umpire or ball club in the American League in any manner."

See Cancellation Of Service Game

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Army-Navy game, annual superspectacle of the college football season which was whittled down to small-town size this year, stands a good chance of being whittled down this year to no game at all.

* * *

D. C. Speaker, the mythical District of Columbia character who represents authentic but unquotable sources, said today the service game which has been quietly scheduled for Nov. 27 at West Point faces so much official opposition it is more than likely to be just another broken date.

* * *

"The Navy wants the game played, but the War Department wants it cancelled," said Speaker.

LONGEVITY RECORD

When New York University gave football the heave ho a few years ago, apparently it tossed out the old college custom of firing the coach at the same time . . . Emil Von Elling has served 27 years as N. Y. U. track coach. Bill McCarthy, 22 years as baseball coach, Howard (Jake) Cann 20 years in basketball, Gerald B. Shag Shaughnessy, the International league president, blames football for the decline of college baseball, which was big-time stuff when he went to Notre Dame . . . "And it isn't good football, either," he argues. "I don't know how many Army-Notre Dame games I've seen, but if they can't play any better than that I'll stick to the pros."

Jack Lory, 54, of Lima won the handicap laurels, downing C. F. Stine of White Cottage, and J. R. Dillon of Springfield in a 75-target shootoff.

The women's 16-yard title went to Mrs. H. B. Rader of Jeffersonville, who hit for 91 of 100, then defeated Pauline Noble of Willard 23 to 21 in a 25-target shootoff.

Twelve-year-old Joad Devers of Dayton, took the junior crown with 82 of 100 and Karl Maust of Lima won the amateur all-around title with 236 of 250.

Those with 99 scores at 16 yards were Walter Egged and Albert Schoenlein of Dayton, C. G. Wehr of Hamilton, C. C. Kunkel of Columbus and H. M. Jones of Homestead, Pa. They decided against a shoot off and Schoenlein won second on the flip of a coin. Those turning in 98's in the 16-yard event included Dan Pickering of Lancaster.

Yunckers Held To Lone Single

Cochrane Fans 18 as Legion Wins Easily.

A single by Flick Flockenzier was the only hit made off Lefty Red Cochrane yesterday as American Legion blanked Yuncker Sports 14-0 at the Fairground in a Commercial baseball league tilt.

Legion sewed up the game early with seven runs in the second and third frames. Cochrane struck out 18 batters, issued only two walks in the tilt which was called at the end of the eighth because of rain.

While the Yuncker hitters were being completely tamed, Legion sluggers went on a rampage. Dean Hahn collected a double and home run, Higgins a homer, Zeiters a double and triple.

League leading Athletic Supplies romped over East End Merchants in the other tilt 8-1 as Jack Elliott turned in a four-hit victory, with 13 strikeouts.

Merchants scored their lone run in the first inning, with Athletics tying it up in the second, and winning in the third with a four-run rally.

Hassinger Paces Muzzle Loaders

Cy Hassinger paced Mansfield Muzzle Loader rifle club shooters Saturday with a percentage of 73.2 in five matches at 30 yards, off hand. G. Lantz had 61 and T. Nelson 44.4.

Nelson was first in the 30-yard string measure with 2.78 inches for three shots. E. Sziraki had 3.48 and Lantz 3.71.

Hassinger took the 50-yard rest shoot with a string of 1.52 inches for three shots. E. Light had 1.60 and J. Baldinger 1.80. Hassinger took possession of the "Navy" cup for the next three months, having nine firsts in the last quarter.

Ohio Navy Colleges Agree on Grid Plans

No League Formed at Mansfield Meeting; Navy Program Comes First.

OHIO COLLEGES with Navy programs, in a meeting yesterday at Mansfield-Leland hotel, definitely agreed upon the desirability of carrying on athletic programs for the duration.

"No league was formed," Coach George Gauthier of Ohio Wesleyan, who called the meeting, declared, "since the Navy does not permit athletic leagues.. And naturally no championships will be recognized."

Attending the meeting were athletic directors, Navy physical education officers, and the commanding officers of the Naval bases at Baldwin-Wallace, Bowling Green, Case, Denison, Miami, Oberlin, Wooster and Ohio Wesleyan.

Also represented at the meeting, although not committed to sport competition within the group, were Depauw University of Indiana, and John Carroll.

"It was agreed," Gauthier reported, "that the athletic program would be conducted by the colleges, but that nothing in the athletic program should interfere with the Naval program of training officers. The Navy program comes first.

"It was also understood that trips made by Navy teams must be short, since the Navy does not permit more than 48 hours' leave from base for athletic trips. And in many cases where examinations are held on Saturday mornings, players will not be able to leave on trips until Saturday noon."

Gauthier pointed out that while no league is formed, the Navy schools will attempt to meet cancellations in their football schedule this fall by other colleges through scheduling games within the group.

Nothing was done at the meeting about basketball schedules. "We'll see how we come out in football and then probably hold another meeting," Gauthier said.

* * *

Neither was the question of eligibility of players raised. "We probably will be attempting to carry on college football under the strictest scholarship standards ever raised," Gauthier declared, "since commanding officers have the power to declare a boy eligible or ineligible for each game, depending on his grades, and a boy who flunks out in one subject is automatically out of the Navy."

Six Indians Rate Honor

Travel To Star Tilt; Split With Senators.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Six Cleveland Indians head eastward today and the remainder of the tribe treks to the west, where league hostilities will resume after Philadelphia's all-star classic Tuesday.

The select half dozen—Lou Boudreau, Ken Keltner, Al Smith, Jim Bagby, Buddy Rosar and Jeff Heath—were chosen on the junior loop's all-star team.

The tribe ended a series with Washington yesterday splitting a 5 to 1 triumph and a 6 to 4 defeat. Al Smith allowed only 5 hits as he chalked up his eighth victory against two defeats, and in the same motion handed young Milo Candini his first loss of the season.

In the nightcap, Allie Reynolds allowed only a pop single for six innings and then fell victim to three hits and a stomach disorder and left the game. Pete Center, last of five Cleveland hurlers to see action in the game, forced in the final Washington run by issuing two bases on balls.

Out of league action until Thursday, the sixth-place Indians will play a military team in a St. Louis exhibition game Wednesday.

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds, with exception of Lonnie Frey, Eddie Miller and Johnny Vander Meer, were headed home today following a successful conclusion of their eastern swing. The three gentlemen mentioned remained in Philadelphia to take part in the all-star game scheduled here Tuesday night.

The Reds came into their own in yesterday's doubleheader sweeping both ends of the program, 7 to 4 and 14 to 2.

The second game, which was halted twice because of weather, was called at the end of the eighth because of the Sunday time law which permits no inning to start after 6:59 p. m.

In addition to putting the Reds over the .500 mark, the double victory marked the return to winning form of Bucky Walters, who, until today, hadn't won a game since May 26.

Ray Starr, who has pitched good ball all along even though the Reds have failed to score for him, got credit for the nightcap.

Walters not only held the Phils to seven hits, four of them in the seventh, but he also was the hitting star of the opener with a long homer and two singles and three runs batted in.

Indianapolis Regains Lead

Brewers Jolted Out of First By Mudhens.

(By Associated Press)

With Toledo jolting Milwaukee twice yesterday, Indianapolis needed only a split in its doubleheader with Minneapolis to regain the American Association lead with a half-game lead over the battling Brewers.

The Brewers are scheduled for another twin bill at Toledo tonight, but the only way they could climb back on top would be to sweep the two games while the Tribe was losing its single game with the Millers.

Strengthening their hold on fourth place, the Mudhens beat Milwaukee 4-3 and 5-0.

The Millers broke a seven-game losing streak by beating the Tribe 7 to 1, but the Indians captured the second 4 to 2.

At Louisville, Joe Vitter, returning to the St. Paul line-up after being treated in a hospital for injuries suffered Saturday, banged out a triple and a home run to give the Saints an 8-4 second game victory after they had dropped the first, 11-0.

Columbus shook off the last-place Kansas City Blues 4-2 and 9-1.

Allied Planes Use Sicilian Fields To Aid In Advance

CAPTURED AIR BASES QUICKLY MADE USABLE

German Troops Try To Stem Allied Forces Briefly, But Soon Retreat.

By EDWARD GILLING
(Representing the Combined British Press)
(Distributed by Associated Press)

AN ALLIED COMMAND POST IN THE MEDITERRANEAN AREA, July 11—(Delayed)—Allied planes were operating today from captured airfields in Sicily.

German troops have been thrown in, in an endeavor to hold up our advance.

Last night when British troops entered Syracuse at 9 p. m. there was some fighting in the streets and German troops tried to hold out in the barracks of the town but by dawn this morning fighting had ceased and the enemy was completely cleared from the town and port.

Later in the day allied minesweepers cleared the beach approaches of mines.

On the southern coast American troops have captured the ports of Licata and Gela and equipment already is being unloaded there.

The bridgehead held by the Americans is 25 miles in length and ten miles deep.

Between them and the British Eighth army on the right are the Canadians, who took a big part in the capture of Pachino peninsula yesterday.

Today allied troops were fanning out as they advanced inland and up to midday was no sign of an enemy counterattack.

An official of one town which our troops occupied without much trouble offered to go to a nearby town in which the enemy was resisting to advise them to surrender with the result that the town then surrendered.

More than 4,000 prisoners were taken yesterday and an Italian coastal regiment was virtually wiped out.

Enemy air opposition throughout the whole of Saturday was practically negligible but today enemy aircraft is slightly more in evidence which is another indication that the landing caught the enemy off balance.

SENT TO O. S. R.

Youth, 17, Sentenced on Check Forgery Charge.

Appearing before Judge Stuart H. Cramer in juvenile court today, a 17-year-old boy charged with forgery, was given an indeterminate sentence in the Ohio State reformatory.

A second offender, the youth was arrested Thursday night and after questioning confessed to stealing a check writing machine and six blank checks from the office of the Richland County Farm Bureau. He had cashed three of the checks totaling $150 and when apprehended told police he had thrown $100 into a creek east of Mansfield so he would not be caught with the money on him.

A year ago the boy was brought into court after he stole more than $400 from his uncle, juvenile authorities said. They explained he had paid back all of the amount stolen and had apparently been behaving himself until the theft last week.

CIVILIAN SUPPLY OF BUTTER, CHEESE AND MILK CURTAILED

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—The war food administration (WFA) announced that for the 12 months beginning with July civilians would have to get along with less butter, cheese, and most kinds of processed milk. The butter cut will be 404 million pounds under the previous year with the supply reported at 1,670,000,000 pounds, compared with apparent civilian consumption of 2,074,000,000 in the previous twelve months.

The armed forces have been alloted 1½ pounds out of every 10 pounds of butter produced and the Russian army will receive ½ pound, leaving approximately 8 of every 10 pounds for civilians.

Civilians will get 508,000,000 pounds of cheese, 5½ out of every 10 produced, and the remainder will be divided among the armed forces, countries receiving defense aid, the Red Cross and U. S. territorial possessions, with the Allies getting the largest share. The apparent civilian consumption last year was 838,000,000 pounds.

Of the 69,000,000 cases of evaporated milk expected to be available during the next 12 months, 30,000,000 or 4⅓ cases out of ten have been allotted to civilian use. Military and war services will get slightly more than 24,000,000 cases or 3½ of every ten cases. The apparent civilian consumption last year was 2,301,000,000 pounds while the allotment this year is approximately 1,305,000,000 pounds.

The condensed milk allotment was set at 212,000,000 pounds compared to 267,000,000 pounds last year while the civilian share of dried whole milk was put at 20,000,000 pounds compared with 17,000,000 last year and two kinds of dried skim milk at 90,000,000 pounds compared with 305,000,000 pounds last year.

The WFA said the allocations were based on expected production and therefore would be "firm" for only three months.

DESCRIBES HOW ITALIANS AIDED BRITISH TO LAND

Writer Says Prisoners Helped Unloading of Boats Few Hours After Capture.

By DESMOND TIGHE
(Reuter's Special Correspondent)
(Distributed by INS)

AN ALLIED BEACHHEAD IN SICILY—(Delayed)—Italian prisoners cheerfully helped British infantrymen unload stores and ammunition from landing craft only a few hours after the Britons captured this beachhead.

It was exactly midnight when we first approached the beach. The sky was illuminated by the flashes of bombs, dozens of fiercely-burning fires and flaring flares which hung suspended in the void above us, like fairy lamps.

The wind had risen as tank-landing craft, trawlers and motor torpedo boats wallowed and plunged in the trough of the sea while escorting destroyers circled vigilantly.

(Editor's Note: The mention of tank-landing craft is the first indication received in London that the Allies had taken tanks ashore. The Daily Express military expert commented that it must be expected that the American-made Gen. Sherman as well as its Churchill tanks, would be landed in Sicily.)

We slithered over the tops of waves and took some time to reach the shore. A searchlight ashore suddenly lit up and swung toward us—then miraculously went out just as its beam reached us.

To our right, where other assault craft already had hit the beach, streams of red tracers seared the blackness of the night.

The thunder of the surf grew louder as we passed a small island. Then I saw the shore, a white lighthouse and some concrete pillboxes.

"Get ready to land," whispered the young officer in charge. The forward gangway was swung down and the troops, heavily laden with their kits and weapons, plunged into the surging sea and stumbled ashore.

Led by their colonel, they moved ahead calmly in Indian file. Suddenly the silence was broken by the sharp crack of machine-gun fire. The bullets sang over our heads and whanged into the metal sides of our assault craft. The boat backed out a bit, then barged ahead to a more promising spot to unload our heavy equipment.

Jeeps and motorcycles were ridden through the breakers and pushed upon to the beach while men stumbled back and forth with boxes of ammunition.

As far as I could see, tank-landing craft chugged toward the beaches while warships slammed shells at enemy positions.

Suddenly I saw the floating gray-green wreckage of a plane . . . we altered our course and pulled aboard nine nearly exhausted paratroopers who had been in the water since 11 o'clock the previous night, when they had landed just short of the shore.

Our party suffered no casualties. Every man from every ship was landed safely on the beaches.

CHECK FOREIGN AIRPORT PLANS

Truman Investigators Report U. S. To Turn Dromes Back 6 Months After War.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — The Truman war investigating committee today was looking into the construction by the United States of hundreds of military airports for foreign nations.

Sen. Harry S. Truman (D) Mo., chairman of the committee, said that the group had been informed that contracts under which the airports are being built provide for their transfer to foreign countries six months after the war ends.

Sens. Mead (D) N. Y., and Brewster (R) Maine, members of the committee, were asked to investigate terms of the airport contracts.

Truman said that "we just want to find out what the facts" of the case are explaining that there was no complaint against this country building the fields.

Committee members feel, it was said, that the airports, being constructed with War Department and Lend-lease funds, should give the United States an important bargaining lever in working out agreements with its Allies for the right of postwar commercial air transit.

Mead and Brewster have been holding private hearings with army, navy, lend-lease and board of economic warfare officials. They will gather additional information on the airports when they make an inspection tour of American troops and equipment at the battle fronts this summer along with three other senators.

TIRE RULING

Ration Chairman Says Drivers Must Comply To Get Aid.

Chairman Charles C. Beelman of the ration board announced today all applications for tires for transportation to and from work will be denied by the board unless the applicant conforms to certain regulations made necessary by the small quota with no additional allotment in sight for the month of July.

He said the applicant must have formed a bona fide full ride sharing club or present evidence to the board that alternate means of transportation are not available or adequate and that he is sharing his car with as many people as possible to be eligible for new tires.

It will be impossible to issue certificates for spare tires during this acute shortage, the chairman said and stated that all B or C book holders applying for tires must be governed entirely by quota restrictions.

He added that effective as of July 1, only A book holders who require the use of their cars for occupational driving, are now eligible for grade three tires. All A book holders are still eligible for new tubes.

UNEVEN TRENDS RULE ACTIVITY ON STOCK LIST

Steel Production Sets New Record In Spite of Coal Strike Interruptions.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Slightly uneven trends ruled in today's early stock market transactions.

On the upside at a quiet opening were Standard Oil (NJ), Standard Oil of Cal., American Telephone, Reynolds Tobacco "B," Chesapeake & Ohio, Consolidated Edison and Phelps Dodge.

Notice was taken of the magazine "Steel" survey which said that ingot production for the first half of this year amounted to 43,866,912 tons, a record despite recent interruptions caused by work stoppage in the coal mines. Fuel shortages, however, it was added, cut June output to the lowest since the like 1943 month with the exception of February.

CHICAGO—(AP)—Grains opened with minor gains today in a continuation of the buying movement which got underway last Saturday. Rye led the upturn in a quiet trade.

Wheat started unchanged to ½ higher, July $1.46⅝. September $1.46½-¾, and rye was up ¼ to 1 cent, July $1.12⅞.

THEATERS

Make Debuts.

"Stage Door Canteen" Sol Lesser's star-studded production, in which 48 entertainers of the stage, screen and radio appear as themselves, sets the records for "firsts." Katharine Cornell, first lady of the American theater, is making her first appearance in motion pictures and Gracie Fields, British songstress-entertainer, takes her first bow in an American film. The film, now at the Ohio, stars Cheryl Walker and William Terry. The musical end of the picture is handled by six of the nation's top bands—Kay Kyser Benny Goodman, Guy Lombardo, Freddy Martin, Count Basie and Xavier Cugat.

Occupied Europe.

"This Land Is Mine," now at the Madison, is said to present an authentic depiction of Nazi methods in taking over a peaceful village of occupied Europe. Charles Laughton and Maureen O'Hara are starred and George Sanders heads the supporting cast. The plot revolves about Laughton's transformation from a timid and ineffectual schoolteacher into a determined patriot who sacrifices his life in arousing his fellow villagers to resist the invaders. Other Madison picture is "All By Myself," a musical starring Rosemary Lane, Patric Knowles and Evelyn Ankers.

Desert Victory.

"Desert Victory" current top Ritz attraction shows the smashing conquest of the German forces by the Allies in Africa. "Desert Victory" is the complete photographic story of that brilliant military achievement from the time General Alexander received Prime Minister Winston Churchill's directive, until the climatic moment when the general could answer "your orders fulfilled." Lana Turner and Robert Young team up in the co-attraction, "Slightly Dangerous," story of a soda jerk's troubles in the big city.

dividuals from similar action under the "informer" statute. He said no proceedings will be begun unless the curernt investigation warrants them.

Meanwhile, Vaughan denied all charges, contending that Curtiss - Wright equipment is making an outstanding contribution to the winning of the war.

The Truman report, while devoting much of its space to charges against Curtiss-Wright, gave an optimistic overall picture of American airpower, and even tempered its criticism of Curtiss by declaring that "its performance, taken as a whole, has been creditable."

Among highlights of the Truman report were:

The United States produced 64,000 planes in the 12 months ending last June 30.

Two new types of fighters—a twin-engined army night-fighter and a navy Grumman "Hellcat"—described, as "capable of exceptional performance"—are in production.

The air force has no longer any great need for dive-bombers, having concluded that they cannot be operated unless there is clear air superiority and unless the enemy lacks proper anti-aircraft equipment.

The army has cut back its glider building program because of difficulty in their operation. "The army is not enthusiastic about gliders," the committee said.

The committee's criticism took in far more than the alleged "defective" equipment of Curtiss-Wright. It accused the army of authorizing many obsolete planes when they launched their program of building up the nation's air force.

It particularly condemned the army for building its fighter plane force around the Curtiss P-40 Warhawk, which it called "usable but second choice." It discontinue production of Warhawks and have Wright concentrate on "Commando" cargo planes.

Other charges against Curtiss-Wright were that it has not produced a single "usable" divebomber for the navy at its $27,000,000 plant at Columbus and that its huge backlog of war contracts is "out of proportion to its ability to fulfill its commitments and out of lines with performance of Curtiss-Wright planes"

The navy, its planes and their makers also won a share of both praise and blame. The navy was criticized for opposing the construction of cargo planes and for using "slow and vulnerable" flying boats in bombing operations against Japanese Zeros. It was also accused of taking credit for putting helicopters into anti-submarine duty when, according to the committee, "the fact is that the navy has no helicopters."

REDUCE OUTPUT

Carnegie-Illinois Forced to Cut Down By Coal Shortage.

YOUNGSTOWN — (AP) — Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation today reduced output of its six big Ohio workers blast furnaces here nearly 25 per cent for a second time as a result of the recent coal strike.

To conserve coke, the blast furnaces' output has been reduced to that of four and a half furnaces. This likely will be reflected in lowered steel tonnage output because use of more cold iron will lengthen time of open hearth heats.

Ganyard Says Farmers Must Set Up Days They Want Help.

Although many Richland county farmers have indicated their need for harvest help, they have not reported to the emergency farm labor officials the number of workers or the time they will be needed, George Ganyard, county extension agent said today.

"We have 25 or 30 registered for part time work and many of them are not placed because the farmers have left us in the dark as to their needs," he said.

Ganyard said farmers now need workers to help them make hay, harvest wheat, and thresh wheat but it will be impossible for the emergency program to be of help to the farmers unless they call at the extension office for this help.

ALLIES CAPTURE SYRACUSE, NINE MORE KEY PORTS

British Troops Smash Way Into Major City; Yanks Drive Italians Back.

Reggio Calabria on the Italian mainland.

Flames from Catania's railway yards gave off smoke visible for 140 miles at sea after a Flying Fortress formation roared homeward, leaving fires raging in oil storage dumps.

With the Italian fleet still noticeable by its absence, Allied naval forces continued large-scale operations of putting ashore more and more Allied troops and equipment, although the Allied communique said the enemy's air opposition was increasing.

Swarms of Allied fighters patrolled the beaches, protecting the operations, however, and 45 enemy aircraft were shot down yesterday. Only nine Allied planes were lost.

Casualties among the Allies continued much less than might normally be expected in such a sweeping offensive, it was said at Allied headquarters, and a number of hospital ships were still waiting in reserve.

One Allied hospital ship, which was fully lighted and anchored three miles off the Sicilian coast, was sunk Saturday night by enemy bombers, but the 400 wounded were successfully transferred.

As a result of the swiftness of Allied action, it was said at headquarters that the enemy was being compelled to regroup his forces and most of his counter-attacks up to now had been comparatively weak.

Most of the Italians, especially, were reported fighting poorly, and most of the 2,000 prisoners taken were Italians.

Between the wings of the Allied forces, buttressed at Licata on the west and Syracuse on the east were the important towns of Ragusa and Modica.

(Algiers broadcasts said sharp fighting was taking place between Allied forces and 30,000 Germans near Ragusa, a little more than 10 miles inland and almost midway between Syracuse and Licata. The broadcast was repeated by the London radio, and recorded in New York.)

In their swift thrust up the strategic eastern coastline of Sicily and Allied forces were near Catalina and only about 80 miles from Messina and the Italian mainland.

(The Morocco radio broadcast a report, recorded in London by Reuters, that the Allies had captured Catania airdrome.)

The airline distance is only 30 miles from Syracuse to Catania, while Messina, across the narrow straits to the Italian mainland, is only 60 additional miles away.

Syracuse was an invaluable prize for the Allies, for its splendid port is the best possible kind of base from which they might mount an invasion of Europe.

Naval forces contributed powerfully to the co-ordinated push, bombarding defended areas near Pozzallo and the railway between Syracuse and Ragusa last night, while an Allied destroyer commander accepted the surrender of Pozzallo early yesterday afternoon.

The surrender of Pozzallo recalled the destroyer Nibian's capture of Linosa island last month when 140 shaken Italian troops surrendered as soon as the warship appeared.

The Allied Line now resembled a crescent, with the Americans at the western point and the British at the eastern tip.

Five of the points captured were on the highway which cuts across the southeastern corner of the island, and the Allies were now ready to link up the horns of the crescent by a drive deep into central Sicily.

An Allied headquarters communique said:

"Few details are available on the work of the navy during the past 24 hours.

"The task of disembarking troops and their supplies on all beaches continues according to plan.

"On the whole weather conditions have improved though enemy interference from the air has been on a slightly increased scale.

"Defended areas near the coast town of Pozzallo, 12 miles west of Cape Carrenzi, and the railroad line between Syracuse and Ragusa were bombarded last night by our destroyers.

"The surrender of Pozzallo was accepted by the commanding officer of a destroyer during the early afternoon Sunday.

"Our ground forces have continued to make good progress.

"During the course of the day seven enemy counter-attacks which were being made with tanks have been repulsed and at least 2,000 prisoners have been taken.

"It can now be stated that the following major towns and ports have been captured by our forces:

"Syracuse, Avola, Pachino, Pozzallo, Scoglitti, Gela, Licata, Ispica, Rosolini and Noto."

Syracuse is approximately 30 miles north of Capo Passero, at the southeastern tip of the island and is a city of 53,000 population.

Licata, at the extreme left wing of the string of ports and towns taken in the Allied advance, is approximately 80 miles west of the cape.

The headquarters announcement said the Allied navies continued to roll reinforcements of men and supplies onto all beaches seized in the 100-mile stretch of Sicilian coast yesterday despite increased air opposition, while ground forces made good progress and repulsed all enemy counterattacks.

Fleets of fighter-bombers, including the fast new American A-36s, swarmed over the contested areas yesterday in increasingly violent attacks on Axis troops, an Allied war communique announced, and headquarters advices said about 400 Axis vehicles loaded with soldiers and supplies were destroyed or damaged in the fiery onslaught.

While the swarms of fighters roamed the beachheads protecting American, British and Canadian troops and maintained effective air control, formations of heavy and medium bombers smashed at Catania's communications on the east coast, the airdromes of Sciacca, Milo and Gerbini and hit heavily at two others at and near Reggio Calabria on the Italian toe.

The American attack bombers swarmed to their furious assault when several hundred Axis vehicles were attempting to rush soldiers and supplies to check the rapid Allied advances into the interior of Sicily after the Americans had seized two airfields at Gela and the British and Canadians had gained control of a third at Pachino.

(Algiers broadcasts, recorded in London and rebroadcast by the London radio, said a violent battle was raging between Allied troops and 30,000 Germans for possession of the town of Ragusa, a little over 20 miles inland and approximately mid-way between the Americans on the Allied left wing at Gela and the British and Canadians on the Allied right wing at Pachino on Capo Passero.

(Ralph Howard, NBC commentator, in an Algiers broadcast, said "large scale landings are still being made by both the American and British forces on a 100 miles of coast line in southeast Sicily, where our troops continue to battle their way inland.)

American troops apparently completely controlled the vital southern port of Gela, with its important road railway facilities approximately 55 miles west of the southeastern tip of the island.

The Allied command officially said that American and RAF fighters "maintained control" of the air over the advancing Allied troops.

The official air report said 45 enemy planes were destroyed yesterday, compared with the loss of nine Allied aircraft.

The enemy obviously was trying to build up forces for a counter-attack, for pilots reported heavy troop movements on many roads leading to southeastern Sicily.

The resulting raids on transport by the A-36 Mustangs equalled in fury any strafing in the African campaign.

Four-engined bombers attacked essential communication systems at Catania on the middle stretch of the eastern coast and medium bombers blazed away at the enemy's airdromes, the communique said, while patrols of fighters protected Allied beachheads.

These new aerial blows were keyed with assaults by fleets of American Liberator bombers from the middle east command which heavily bombarded the Reggio Calabria and Vibo Valentia airdromes on the toe of the Italian mainland.

Describes Canadian Advance In Sicily

(Editor's Note: Following is a detailed eyewitness of the Canadian assault on southeastern Sicily and the first 24 hours of their invasion.)

By ROSS MUNROE
(Canadian Press War Correspondent)

(Distributed by the Associated Press)

WITH THE CANADIANS IN SOUTHEAST SICILY, July 11—(Delayed)—Slicing through Italian defenses in night and dawn landings on the long crescent beach, Canadian assault troops with a crack British formation on the right flank overran Pachino peninsula within 24 hours and established an invasion bridgehead.

It has been one success after another in this Canadian-British sector as the greatest combined operation in history was launched.

The Canadians now have advanced into hilly country northwest and west of Pachino and major engagements are expected with probably more determined Italians than the coastal defenders who put up only a mild fight.

The past night and day have been one incredible series of incidents. I landed alongside the first wave of assault companies of a famous Canadian regiment on the sandy beach of Costa Dell Ambra, four miles southwest of Pachino, at 5:15 yesterday morning and the Canucks have been rushing ahead ever since. It is a tough job keeping up with them on two feet.

Canadian casualties for the first day were very light. The colonel who heads the divisional medical service said less than 40 had been reported to him so far. During my trip around the battle zone I only saw three wounded soldiers who had been hit cleaning out a pillbox just before the beach defense collapsed.

There is a British hospital ship in our convoy now. It is lighted up at night.

The Italian beach defenses which folded up like a concertina were merely barbed wire and some machinegun posts which fired a few bursts and then gave up. On our beach the enemy evidently was counting on a sandbar 15 feet off shore as a natural defense. But the Canadians surprised them completely by coming in in the heavy surf and battling ashore through water to their waist.

HELD ON CHARGE

Mansfielder Draws Suspended Fine, Jail Sentence.

Convicted on a charge of assault and battery, Carl Moxley, colored, of 222 North Franklin avenue, was fined $10 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in jail, both of which were suspended on condition of good behavior by Judge Herbert H. Schlettler in Municipal court today.

Charges were filed by Moxley's wife, following a domestic quarrel Sunday in which she received lacerations and bruises. She was treated at General hospital.

Where Allies 'Softened Up' For Invasion

Gigantic aerial attack by 100 Liberator bombers on Taormina, which preceded the Allied landing on Sicily, completely demolished Axis military headquarters there. This view of Taormina shows the Straits of Messina, across which lies the Italian mainland, about 20 miles away. The San Domenico hotel in Taormina, which housed the Axis high command, and the postoffice building which served as headquarters for the island's telephone and telegraph facilities, were destroyed.

All Europe Alerted For New Thrust

BERN—(AP)—The entire fortress of Europe was on the alert today for new lightning Allied thrust as Axis leaders in Germany and Italy anxiously watched the progress of the battle for the Mediterranean island of Sicily.

Dispatches reaching here today from Berlin and Rome conceded that the Allies had established at least four bridgeheads in Sicily and looked ahead glumly to a day not far distant when they expect invasion barges to grate upon other shores along the Mediterranean.

Of the two Axis capitals Berlin took the news of the invasion more calmly, pointing out that it had long been expected and declaring that advance Allied parachutists and airborne units had been annihilated or surrounded and captured.

There was mounting tension in Rome and on the mainland of Italy.

One dispatch from Milan said Premier Mussolini and King Vittorio Emanuele had made a point of being seen publicly in Rome, where the "atmosphere is heavy," and private sources revealed Mussolini had presided over a cabinet meeting yesterday.

It also was reported there had been further expulsions in the Fascist part in an effort to bolster crumbling morale and Italian newspapers were enlisted in a campaign to whip up enthusiasm for the fighting ahead.

Another factor which appeared to weigh heavily in depressing the Italian state of mind as the crisis approached was a steadily worsening food problem brought about by Allied air attacks on Italian railroads.

U. S. PAYS BILL

Check For Republic Steel Plant At Monroe Received.

DETROIT —(AP)— A government check for $1,642,225 was on deposit with the clerk of U. S. district court today for the Republic Steel Corp in payment for its Monroe (Mich.) plant.

The plant was taken over by the government last November through the Defense Plant Corp. of America for manufacture of aluminum dropforged cylinder heads for military aircraft.

'TURNING POINT'

ISTANBUL— (Delayed) —(AP)— Istanbul's 14 newspapers, which circulate throughout Turkey, announced the Allied invasion of Italy with screaming headlines today and editorially termed the action the turning point in the war.

Bombings Make Italians Change Tune

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — The Italians today are calling the Allied bombing of Italy "barbaric and inhuman," but a couple of years ago, when the Germans were doing the bombing, they were writing in their papers, "Hurrah for brutality; England must be destroyed."

The Office of War Information, checking over the record, brings back one infamous statement in particular to remind the Italian leaders of their own record. It was uttered by Mussolini's son, Vittorio, describing a bombardment of Ethiopia:

"One group of horsemen gave me the impression of a budding rose unfolding as the bomb fell in their midst and blew them up. It was exceptionally good fun."

Allied Losses Light, Populace Friendly

LONDON — (INS) — Allied losses in Sicily have been light, the Algiers radio said today, according to the Reuter news agency.

The population of Sicily is adopting a friendly attitude toward the invaders, Algiers declared.

be selling beer to these minors.

"As long as there are midnight shows and parents allow their children to be out on the streets tearing around in automobiles at all hours of the night there is bound to be trouble," the judge said.

"It's all well and good for Chief Bates to criticize the juvenile court but we have only one officer for the entire county and there are 35 on the city police force," he stated. (Police department officials said today there are 31 officers on the force.)

Meanwhile, today seven youths awaited hearing before Judge Cramer at 9:30 tomorrow when they will appear in court with their parents.

The first group of delinquents was arrested by city police early Saturday morning at the corner of Orange street and Central avenue. The five youth ranging in age from 14 to 17 had been drinking and were tampering with a car when the police found them, it was reported.

At 11:45 p. m. Saturday the other two boys 13 and 16 were taken into custody at Sixth and Main streets for intoxication.

Sunday afternoon sheriff's deputies were called to investigate reports of four children at 146 North Franklin avenue being left alone by their parents Sunday morning.

Officers said the parents had told the children they were going to get a jug of buttermilk at a Bowman street dairy and did not return to get the children's dinner.

dive bombers which spotted us after waves of our troops were already on the beach.

By the brilliant light of magnesium flares they dropped nine or ten half-ton bombs which missed their targets and so fell without doing any harm.

A few enemy shore batteries in the region of Sconlitti attempted to duel with our cruisers and destroyers, but were quicly silenced.

Our troops ashore reported encountering only light machinegun fire.

America's most thoroughly trained army division now is in action against the Axis in Sicily.

For the time being its identity cannot be disclosed, but this hard-hitting unit has gone into battle without any "withdrawal plan" in case of reverses. One of its crack officers explained the meaning of this in these words:

"There can be no question of pulling out, no matter what kind of resistance we encounter. We're going in to hit, hold, and advance.

"We haven't even learned how to retreat or withdraw. The only way we know is forward, no matter what we're up against."

This particular outfit considers itself America's "elite," because it has the best and newest arms produced in the United States—and also because of new strengthened organizational setup which if it proves successful may be extended to other divisional units.

One of its officers told me:

"We have everything we need except battle experience. What we'll do in combat is up to the officers and men themselves. I'm confident this will prove one of the hardest-hitting, toughest divisions in the army."

The soldiers themselves reflect this confidence.

They want to take care of Rome, Berlin, Tokyo, and the Axis by marching into the capitals in that order. And they don't want to go home until the job is done.

This division has been working and training constantly at a variety of camps in several sections of the United States. It has had many months of training in amphibious warfare plus drill in mountain tactics.

Its commanding general was one of the youngest colonels in World war I. He saw action during the major engagements in France. The division's artillery commander is another hardbitten soldier.

Workers Start Return To Coal Mines In Pennsylvania.

PITTSBURGH —(U.P.)— A back-to-work movement cut into the ranks of striking miners in the Pennsylvania soft coal fields today as a number of mines resumed full or partial operations, but the outlook for steel production continued dark.

United States Steel corp. has been forced to bank 13 blast furnaces, and steel ingot production in the Pittsburgh district was scheduled to decline at least five per cent to 94½ per cent of capacity this week.

A survey showed that the number of idle miners had been reduced by about 5,000 men to 18,000.

aerial assault would be necessary to complete the job, he said.

Strength of the Munda garrison was not known but it was believed to number several thousand men and Osmar White, Australian correspondent on New Georgia, said the enemy probably had slipped in some reinforcements and was expected to make a death defense of the base. Allied troops were fighting sporadic actions in the jungle fringe, White said.

Reports placed the American forces about two miles east of Munda north of Roviana lagoon; to the north of the base they were about five miles away and edging in.

Japanese air activity weakened all along the 750-mile arc of attack set up by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's drive to roll back the Japanese in the south and southwest Pacific.

Hewlett said an official compilation showed that fighters had shot down 173 enemy planes since the central Solomons invasion started June 30. Twenty-five or more were destroyed by ground fire and bombers in the same area. Less and less opposition met Allied planes attacking the New Guinea coast near Salamaua in aid of ground troops.

Bombers dropped 40 tons of explosives on Kahili airdrome on Bougainville island in the North Solomons and a single Catalina bombed Vila. Today's communique from MacArthur did not refer to any ground action in New Georgia.

Mitchells, also operating in support of ground forces, bombed and strafed the Salamaua area of northeast New Guinea. Forty-nine tons of bombs were dropped on Japanese ground positions yesterday, adding to the 46 tons let loose the day before. Five or seven enemy fighters were shot down and two Lightning escorts were lost.

Above New Guinea Liberators made a two-hour attack on the big Vanakanau airdrome at Rabaul, New Britain, setting off five big fires with 35 tons of bombs. The communique said small Allied surface craft, probably P-T boats, sank four loaded enemy supply barges in Huon Gulf near Salamaua.

In other far ranging raids, Allied planes shot down or damaged 10 enemy aircraft, including six of 10 that tried to intercept Liberartors attacking Babo, Dutch New Guinea.

Hit 3 Jap Ships In Burma Raid

NEW DELHI—(U.P.)—Royal Air Force fighters on offensive patrol over Burma damaged three Japanese steamers and other river craft on the Irrawaddy yesterday, a British communique said today.

RAF bombers attacked Minbya, Japanese-occupied village about 30 miles northeast of Akyab in southwestern Burma, and a formation of Blenheims raided Mawlaid on the Cindwin river.

Says Munda Needs 'Just Another Touch'

GUADALCANAL, July 9—(U.P.)—(Delayed)—Munda may need only the slightest additional touch of bombing, Lt. Comdr. Spencer Butts of Harpers Ferry, W. Va., said today.

Butts, member of a bomber squadron which dropped 70 tons of bombs on the Japanese base, said "I think this is the last time we'll have to bomb that base."

The red-haired flier agreed with other members of his crack bombing squadron that Munda probably will fall within a week at most.

and aviation protecting the Red infantry destroyed 34 tanks and disp[illegible]ed the remainder, the Russions said.

Altogether the Russians say they have repelled ten German attempts to advance on the Belgorod sector.

While still working hard to break through in the Belgorod area, the Germans attacked strongly in the Orel-Kursk sector at the northern end of the Kursk salient.

Soviet tanks, following the favorite tactics of digging themselves into the ground and fighting from ambush, accounted for a large number of 162 tanks which the Germans were said to have lost yesterday. The Nazi airforce lost only 31 planes yesterday, the smallest number since the offensive began.

FUND SURPLUS BIG HEADACHE

ment projects and delayed action on the $27,000 sewer job.

City Auditor Paul L. Kelley pointed out yesterday that remittal of the sewer rental charges payable during the second half of the year cut $50,000 from the city revenue and it won't be possible to map any extensive sewer program for this year.

Nearly all city officials, Democrats and Republicans alike, have contended that the surplus uncovered by the Chamber of Commerce was "hypothetical" because it was based on anticipated revenue and did not take into consideration street, waterworks, and sewer projects which were on the program for this year and in some cases are already under way.

Now that the sewer charge for the half year has been forgiven, there's no chance that the surplus can exceed $600,000, officials explain. Besides, they point out, the Chamber of Commerce estimate took in every city department, and some of the funds included in the total are ear-marked for special purposes and can't be spent for any kind of project or for salary raises.

Quartermasters to the Home Front

Youngsters, retired salespeople, and untrained, part-time workers are now enlisted as quartermasters to the home front . . . supplying civilian needs across the counters of more than a million stores. . . . To them, to you, and to the storekeepers of the nation, the business machines of retailing . . . National Cash Registers . . . are vitally important in our economy.

CONSIDER a busy department with fewer and less experienced people, with more customers to serve. . . . In spite of this, once your selection is made and you offer money to pay, the amount is "rung up" and your receipt printed and issued by the cash register; change is made, parcel wrapped and you're on your way.

There's no waiting for cashiers, inspectors or wrappers, but the 3 or 4 minutes saved when multiplied by billions of transactions in the nation's stores contribute countless hours to a people at war.

More hours are saved in auditing because each salesperson makes several essential records when she "rings up" each transaction.

Luckily, retailers were prepared for war with National Cash Registers which simplify handling of transactions and provide as fast, accurate and protected service as is known.

ARMY SERVES 21,000,000 MEALS DAILY

Biggest Feeding Job In the World Is Handled With Seeming Ease.

(By International News Service)

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—The biggest feeding job in American history — providing some 21,000,000 meals daily for hungry American soldiers both at home and abroad —rests today in the capable hands of Major General E. B. Gregory, quartermaster general of the U. S. army, and a competent staff of assistants.

It is his job to see that every soldier in the United States army is provided with nutritious food to keep him in tip-top fighting shape, and plenty of it.

The mechanics of providing 21,000,000 meals a day are relatively simple—on paper. But when hundreds of thousands of eaters are scattered to the four corners of the globe, then that is another matter.

First of all the quartermaster corps must determine just how much food is needed so that there will be plenty of everything but a wastage of nothing. Outstanding dietitions and general food experts do that. Then it must be purchased and this is done through 35 special marketing centers in all parts of the country and huge procurement depots in Jersey City, Chicago, and Oakland, Cal., plus subsidiary depots in other sections of the country.

It must then be distributed to the different camps throughout the nation and also sent to American troops overseas in operation with the transportation corps.

Finally it must be cooked, but the quartermaster corps does not do that, although it does train the army's bakers and cooks in some 89 schools in all parts of the continental United States and overseas.

The average American soldier eats a little more than five pounds of food a day. Seven million of them will eat close to 37,000,000 pounds of food a day, and will be back for the same amount the next day, and the next, and so on, except that as the days progress the amount gets larger because the army is bigger.

The problem of shipping food to American soldiers overseas with a minimum drain on the overtaxed shipping facilities of the United Nations was one of the quartermaster corps' most difficult problems. It solved this difficulty by developing concentrated foods, devising new packaging processes and shipping methods which are saving millions of cubic feet of space annually in the Allied merchant ships.

Reduced to the simplest common denominator, the entire army feeding program revolves around the individual meal. If that meal, which is only one of the millions served daily, is not palatable, wholesome, nutritious and satisfying then the program is a failure.

To guard against such failure, quartermaster corps food experts developed the master menu, which is the formula upon which meals for every soldier in the army are prepared. The master menu is prepared well in advance each month and sent out to the individual service commands to guide the army cooks and mass officers in the preparation of meals.

A complete menu is drawn up for each meal each day, together with a complete breakdown of all food items and amounts necessary for feeding 100 men. Thus an army cook knows exactly how much food of all kinds to requisition in order to feed the men in his company.

Troops in the actual theater of operations may not be able to eat a regular meal, and if so they subsist on the army's famous new packaged field rations. These are the "C," and "K," the "5-in-1," the "4-in-1" or one of the others which provide complete, properly balanced meals.

In any event they are properly fed and although the field rations are not as heavy and not as complete as those served in mess halls, they nevertheless provide the best combat rations any army has ever enjoyed.

U. S. ARMY GETS DIVE-BOMBER CALLED BEST IN THE WORLD

(INS Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK — The destructive might of the U. S. Army Air Forces, now being felt by the enemy on world-wide fighting fronts, today is being augmented by a new type dive-bomber, said to be more powerful and more deadly than any similar type now in use on either side.

Designated the Curtiss A-25, the new plane is an army version of the already famed Curtiss Helldiver now being used by the U. S. navy. G. W. Vaughan, president of the Curtiss-Wright corporation which is producing the planes on an assembly line basis said that details of its speed, armament, cruising range and bomb-carrying capacity are military secrets.

In announcing production of the new dive-bomber, Vaughan revealed that the first plane had already been delivered to the Army Air Forces. He said that the new bomber was tested some time ago and presented formally to the army at a Curtiss Wright plant "somewhere in Missouri." These factory flight tests, he added, were "very satisfactory."

The A-25 is a two place midwing monoplane powered with a 1,700 h.p. Wright Cyclone engine and equipped with a Curtiss electric propeller and retractable landing gear. Vaughan revealed that the design of the new army dive-bomber is so similar to the navy model that with minor changes which can be made in the field, the warplane can be utilized by either service.

To meet the army's demands for large numbers of the planes, Vaughan explained that a major expansion program had been carried out and that the Missouri plant had shifted its emphasis from the production of other army and navy warplane types to that of the new Curtiss A-25. As a result, he said, quantity production of the new dive-bomber on a continously moving assembly line has been under way for some time.

Vaughan explained that the Curtiss-Wright corporation is attaining mass production of the new dive-bomber through the adaption of ultra-modern manufacturing methods to airplane assembly, and by the installation of moving assembly lines for turning out the planes with a minimum of delay.

A continuously moving final assembly line in the corporation's Missouri plant is more than four miles long he said. Major subassemblies such as fuselages, center sections and engines are fed into it from other moving lines. A power conveyor line 1100 feet long assembles center sections; an 800-foot floor chain conveyor system provides for fuselage assembly, and an overhead conveyor line one block long attaches mounts and accessories to the engine.

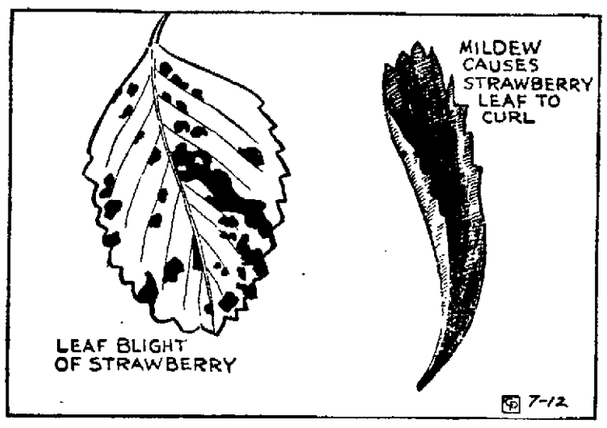
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Strawberry Sanitation In Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Released by Central Press Ass'n.

Many diseases can be prevented in the Victory garden through proper garden hygiene which involves carefully cleaning up and burning of all garden trash and diseased foliage. Keeping plants strong and healthy by cultivation, feeding and watering is another important phase of garden sanitation, for sickly plants fall prey to many diseases which healthy plants are able to resist.

Leaf blight of strawberries, illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, is a common diseased condition of the leaves which rarely attacks new and thrifty plantings. To avoid strawberry blight set out only healthy plants and give them fertile, well drained soil.

Another means of avoiding blight is to grow the more resistant varieties of strawberries such as Premier, Fairfax and Dorsett. To control leaf blight, which is also known as leaf spot, spray with a 4-4-50 Bordeaux mixture before the blossoms open and after the fruits have been harvested.

Sometimes when powdery mildew is present the spraying will have to begin early in the season with Bordeaux mixture. Powdery mildew prodces a white talcum-like growth on the leaves as well as a curling of the foliage, as illustrated in the Garden-Graph.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY JULY 12, 1943.

Only equality of opportunity can be guaranteed—Nature has ruled out equality of ability.

There is plenty of gasoline for NECESSARY purposes—the only reason for an apparent shortage is that some people use more than they actually need.

According to Jay G. Hayden, Washington observer, "Harry Hopkins now is credited with engineering the campaign for a fourth term for Roosevelt"—Harry, as you may recall, being the unelected White House tenant.

Aftermath of Debt and Taxation

A FEW YEARS AGO discussion of public debt and taxation revolved around issues of administrative efficiency and good government. Except for a few taxpayers, no one evidenced much interest in those discussions. Today the situation is gravely different. Debt and taxation are not merely indicators of good or bad administration. Today debt and taxation may determine what kind of government this nation will have in the future—a republic, or a bureaucracy which will rapidly degenerate into dictatorship.

As Business Week has pointed out: "The effects of government taxing and spending always tend to shift the balance in an economy. Inevitably they take income from one group and give it to another. As long as the government operates on a comparatively small scale, this shift passes unnoticed, but its importance grows with every increase in the state's share of national income. Fiscal policy is neutral only when it is negligible.

"At this stage of the game, it is impossible to tell much about the government's revenue requirements or the size of its debt after the war. One thing is certain, however. They won't be negligible."

The public debt is growing at the rate of sixty or seventy billion dollars a year. Taxation is at a rate many times greater than a few years ago. Both taxation and spending are being used in repeated attempts to level opportunity and to change the nature of our government. With every passing day these twin weapons become more potent in the hands of socialistic planners.

Mansfield's Intoxicated Children

SOMETHING more than mild admonitions to youngsters, and a tolerant attitude toward tavern-keepers who sell intoxicants to minors and permit school-age children to congregate in their places of business, seems necessary if the present dangerous wave of night prowling by juveniles is to be effectively curbed.

Requirement for the arrest of boys in the lower teen-ages on intoxication charges after beer-drinking sprees, and the mere fact that young boys and girls are permitted to roam the streets after midnight, unaccompanied by reputable adults, tends to reflect seriously on Mansfield's ability to solve its problem of guarding the health and morals of children too young to be trusted to make their own decisions as to proper personal conduct and who lack parental supervision and desirable home influences.

It is upon Mansfield officials and juvenile authorities, supported by the city's right-thinking adult population, that responsibility rests for action to curb the trend toward greater juvenile delinquency in this community and to wipe out the breeding spots of teen-age drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

The time seems ripe for consideration by council of a restrictive ordinance designed to keep unaccompanied children off the streets unreasonably late at night.

William T. Hursh, 'A Fine Man'

THE NAME, "Hursh's drug store," at its East Fourth and Diamond street corner, has been so familiar to residents of Mansfield and vicinity for almost fifty years that it may be hoped it will not pass from the local scene because of the death of its proprietor, William T. Hursh.

Veteran among local druggists of the old school, Mr. Hursh consistently recognized the high responsibility resting upon him as a pharmacist and this was at all times evidenced in the conduct of his business and the close personal attention he gave to it until failing health prevented.

Aside from his business and his family, it was his church association and activities that held his greatest interest and it is natural that he should have been one of the chief factors in encouraging construction of the United Brethren church edifice on Park avenue east, and that he should have served that organization in some important capacity as long as physically able.

As a brief but fully understandable estimate it is sometimes said of a person, "He is a fine man," and that serves admirably in the case of Mr. Hursh.

Some Interesting Small Islands

SMALL ISLANDS may sometimes be more interesting than large ones which are better known. The Trobriand islands, just seized by General MacArthur, are an example.

For years the inhabitants of the Trobriands have been studied by scientists. Better than almost any other people they represent the human race in its early stages, unspoiled by outside contacts. Leader in this work was Bronislaw Malinowski, an English scientist who at the time of his death was a visiting professor at Yale.

Now the Trobriands are being studied by different people, and for entirely different purposes. The natives, who believe in magic, have never seen stranger magic than the planes and guns brought in by new visitors.

Sound Waves Detect Flaws

SEEING is not always believing. Scientists have developed an instrument which, by using sound waves, will detect flaws in an apparently perfect automobile tire.

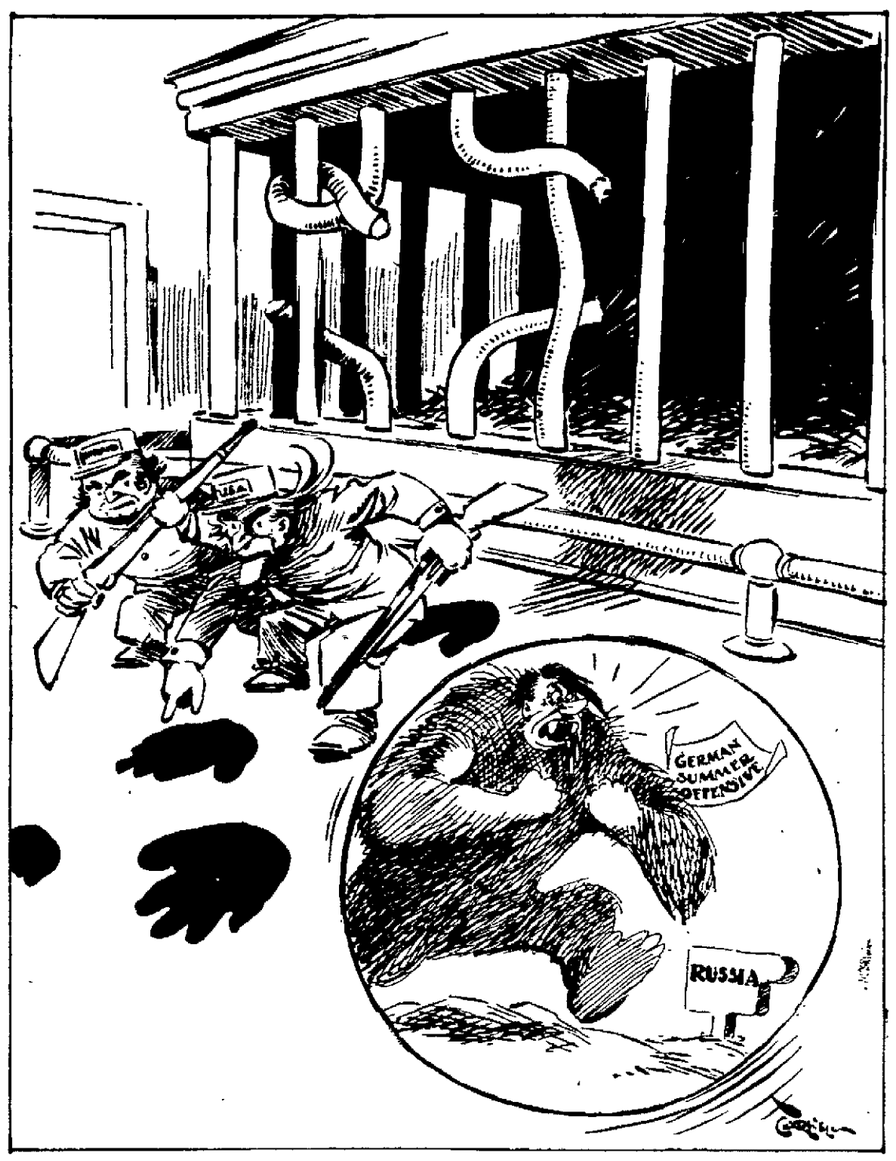
For ages the advice of wise men has been to talk less and listen more. To that may now be added, look less and hear more.

A hick town is defined as "a place where people think a merchant should sell them things without the coupons because they belong to the same lodge."

It is Harry Wade, Detroit News paragrapher, who refers to those horrifyingly long painted fingernails as "built-in banjo picks."

It required 7,500 words for Jesse Jones to reply to Henry Wallace's charges—in what the lawyers would probably call a "brief."

THE MISSING LINK IS LOOSE AGAIN



Goss Tells About Food Bungling

By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—To understand the full significance of the recent resignation of Food "Czar" Chester Davis, and its possible repercussions NEXT YEAR one will find a letter to the editor of the Washington Post by A. S. Goss, master of the National Grange, far more illuminating than anything Mr. Davis himself has said so far. Or for that matter is likely to say. It happens that Mr. Goss is a friend of Chester Davis.

The letter was written taking exception to certain points in an editorial of the Post. Following are a few pertinent excerpts from the letter:

"Your editorial says that Mr. Davis should have accepted no such responsibility. In a way that is true. The chance of failure in such an administrative model is far above the chances of success. However, if none would serve except those who like to work in such an impractical setup, no one of ability could be found to take the responsibility. Mr. Davis, too, saw the dangers ahead, but patriotically agreed to do the best he could.

"He soon began to bring order out of chaos. The meat situation was probably the most chaotic of any major food line. Bungling marked the handling of the meat situation from the start and had cut down the supply and put the livestock industry clear out of balance. Mr. Davis brought in farmers, livestock men and packers, and working with Brown, reached a unanimous agreement as to what should be done.

"These men who know the livestock business worked out a rationing program that was practical and would soon have solved the problem, brought order out of chaos, spread the limited supply of meat and stabilized the price at reasonable figures. The agreement was reduced to writing and signed.

"At this point the president and Director Byrnes took a hand. After consulting with labor leaders who knew nothing whatever about the problem of meeting production and distribution and without even consulting Director Davis, they announced a rollback in prices which completely destroyed the plan which had been so carefully worked out, returning the whole meat situation to a condition more chaotic than ever.

"In the meantime Mr. Davis had scarcely taken his position before a new executive order was issued which completely changed his status. He had been brought down here with the assurance that he would report directly to the president, but the executive order directed him to report to Director Byrnes under one of the new super-authorities which have been periodically set up as a new cure-all.

"Although this was a direct violation of the agreement the president had with Mr. Davis, he showed commendable zeal in going right ahead with his constructive work under the new order. It was not until his whole food program was reversed without even consulting him that Mr. Davis tendered his resignation. It is significant that after holding the resignation 12 days, the only answer the president gave was to accuse him of lack of teamwork and to accuse congress of failure to cooperate.

"Mr. Davis had the knowledge, the courage and the honesty to tell the president that the fantastic price control subsidy program would create food shortages and augment inflation. In spite of the warnings and in spite of the wishes of congress overwhelmingly expressed again and again, the president prefers to follow the advice of the labor leaders in matters dealing with America's food supply."

Representatives and senators from the agricultural states, regardless of party, say there is scarcely a possibility of these arguments not stirring up the folks back home!

One Man's Opinion

WELL the president of the American Library association says people have stopped reading books and it's no wonder.

* * *

Everybody you know is writing a book. Nobody has time to read one.

* * *

There's a new book out by a woman who had a baby. That's all—she had a baby. And she's done a book about it.

* * *

There's another one out by a woman who hasn't done anything particular except have a couple of husbands and a lot of jobs.

* * *

On the male side any man who isn't writing a book is just fresh out of pencils and paper that's all.

* * *

Napoleon said every soldier carried a marshal's baton in his knapsack but our new army carried portable typewriters.

* * *

"See Here Private Hargrove" touched off a literary shower from the armed forces and then the war correspondents moved up and opened a barrage with "I was there" copy.

* * *

Old Harold Ickes has come up with two books in a little less than two months and he's got all Washington scribbling fast.

* * *

Thought for the day: What ever became of the paper shortage?

Dave Boone Says:

THE OPA announces that it is going to tell restaurant men how much they can charge for food. This is the most positive proof so far that the OPA believes in the impossible.

* * *

There are so many types of restaurants serving so many types of dinners with so many notions of what they're worth, with or without a piece of rye bread, that you'd think anybody would be afraid to tackle the job. It ought to be interesting to see an OPA official take a good table in a smart restaurant and just try to get a check that won't exceed his own estimates.

* * *

It would be even more interesting to see and hear an OPA man in a chat with one of those suburban fellows who bought a steer or two months ago so they could raise their own meat and are now told it's against the rules, unless they personally slaughter it.

* * *

If it was all right to plant a victory garden and raise your own tomatoes what's so wrong about planting a victory steak? What makes the tomato patriotic and the steer so criminal?

* * *

And am I getting in bad by raising my own chickens?

Life In Stafford Springs.

Employers and union leaders in Stafford Springs, Conn., are taking credit for an agreement which is giving virtually every employed resident of the village a simultaneous vacation this week. All government contracts in force in the eight woolen mills that keep the population busy called for a week's vacation with pay, so it seemed more logical to shut down the mills than to stagger working schedules.

Life in Stafford Springs without work must be pleasant. When work is resumed, life still will be pleasant. Everybody will be rested. Tension will be gone. Little stresses and strains won't be in so much danger of getting out of perspective. No one imagines that it is going to be possible for every person in the United States to take a vacation, or that mass vacations could be arranged, but if they could be, war production and war morale both would benefit.—Canton Repository.

Some Weeding Out of Personnel Being Considered By President

WASHINGTON—The president has been looking forward to the next sixty days, with congress out of the picture, to do some weeding in his own administration garden.

There are a lot of weeds which he wants to pull—chiefs of departments and other personnel weeds—and he has been telling friends that he is going to to pull them.

One reason the president moves slowly in problems of personnel is not only because he has affection for his friends, but also because he says there is no use replacing a man with a vacancy. He wants to have a good successor picked out beforehand.

So, with congress away, the president has been looking forward to concentrating on getting some new men in his administration—a problem which his advisers all agree sorely needs attention.

They predict that some good plants may get mixed up with the weeds and get pulled also. Even Jesse Jones and Henry Wallace may be subected jto a certain degree of pulling.

Note: The president has felt particularly zestful regarding personnel problems since he wrote the letter firing Chester Davis. He especially liked the last paragraph of that letter in which he told Chester that there was no use in his remaining to formulate the 1944 farm program since he wouldn't be here to carry it out, and that would mean real division of authority—a subject that Chester had been carping to congress about.

"The Women."

WHEN you see Congresswoman Clare Luce out at dinner in Washington you can understand how and why she wrote "The Women," side-splitting drama of women's cattiness at Reno. The men, in Washington, swarm round her. The women don't.

Swishing into Mrs. Edward Stotesbury's home the other evening swaddled in endless yards of pink chiffon, Mrs. Luce was escorted by handsome Australian Lieut. Gen. V. A. H. Sturdee, head of the Australian Military Mission.

Mrs. Stotesbury was in the act of throwing a compliment at equally lovely Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, wife of Woodrow Wilson's attorney general. Mrs. Palmer, slightly embarrassed, passed off the compliment with:

"You know, Mrs. Stotesbury is really my press agent."

"Do you need a press agent?" inquired Mrs. Luce, whose husband publishes Time, Life and Fortune.

"No more than you," shot back Mrs. Palmer. "You married a pretty good one."

Jones vs. Wallace.

RE THE Jesse Jones-Henry Wallace Fight:

A lot of people have the idea that Jesse Jones is the great champion of Big Business and that the Board of Economic Warfare is the New Deal fighter for the under-dog. But the inside fact is that the BEW is just as much for Business as Jesse, and is loaded down with executives from private business.

Interesting fact is that the BEW was about the only outfit which didn't have its appropriation cut by congress, which means that it was the only outfit which didn't have a big lobby buttonholing congressmen to vote against it. (Unfortunately, many congressmen vote at the beckon of lobbies rather than at the beckon of conscience.)

OPA had the big meat-packers, the canners, the farm lobbies all against it. The Office of War Information had the Republican national committee against it. The Farm Security Administration had the Farm Bureau, the cotton planters and the big cattle ranchers against it.

But Milo Perkins and the BEW have buttered up business to such extent that the business lobbies were all for them. What Milo does is buy all critical materials abroad through American importers. Also he sells abroad through the exporters. He buys no matter what the price and they add their commissions on top of that. Incidentally, these high prices plus commissions is one thing that irks Jesse Jones.

How far Milo goes to this end was illustrated when the Chilean government sent a mission to Washington to buy strategic materials from the United States. The Chileans were mystified to learn that they could not purchase anything from the U. S. government. It all had to be done through non-government business channels. They figured they might just as well have stayed at home.

North African Generals.

THERE is no truth to the gossip that Gen. Marshall and Gen. Eisenhower rowed when the chief of staff visited North Africa.

The rumor got started because Eisenhower, anxious to push ahead fast in the Mediterranean, had to be restrained somewhat by Gen. Marshall. However, Gen. Eisenhower is the type who will argue vigorously and effectively regarding any strategy until it is finally settled. But once settled he will carry it out religiously to the last letter.

Contrary to some reports, the fact that Eisenhower once served as chief of staff to Gen. MacArthur for four years in the Philippines does not mean that he stands in the MacArthur camp rather than with Gen. Marshall. Real fact is that both Eisenhower and Brig. Gen. Tom Davis, who was MacArthur's personal aide in the Philippines, have been on the outs with the Pacific commander for some time, and it has been gall and wormwood for MacArthur to see his onetime insignificant subordinate in the Philippines now commanding the most important theater of the war—North Africa.

Note: MacArthur several times has hinted to Washington that he would like to be transferred to command in North Africa. This would have put him over Eisenhower.

Old Military Friends.

FRIENDSHIP between Gen. Eisenhower and Gen. Marshall dates back to World War I when Marshall was the chief strategist for Gen. Pershing and planned troop transfer and strategy behind the St. Mihiel front.

Eisenhower, somewhat younger, has always worshipped Marshall as the greatest military genius of our time. When Marshall picked his younger friend for the North African assignment, he did not tell him what was cooking, but called him in and laid before him a plan of operation for taking North Africa.

"What do you think of it?" Marshall asked.

"It looks OK to me," replied Eisenhower after some study.

"You'd better think so," shot back Marshall. "You're going to be in command."

WACs Are Proud of Work They Are Doing; Escape Rough-and-Tumble Life of Nurses.

(Last of Five Articles on the WACs.)

NORTH AFRICA—(By Wireless)—The WACs in North Africa say they use about the same military slang the army uses. No battlefield language of their own has grown up. They grouse mostly about the same thing soldiers do—their officers, their work, their food—yet actually they don't find any of these very bad.

The WACs have not lived the rough-and-tumble life of army nurses. They don't have to to wear G. I. underwear nor heavy field shoes. They eat at tables, take regular baths and always look crisp and neat.

The only real danger they have been in was air raids on their city, and now these seem to have stopped.

Now and then you hear some officer or soldier say, "Well, I always said woman's place was in the home, and I still think so." But the bulk of the army which comes in contact with the WACs doesn't feel that way at all.

The army knows how well the girls can work, and the enlisted men appreciate that it is not easy for a girl to leave her home and country and come far across the ocean to live. They feel a sort of camaraderie with the WACs.

The WACs themselves are much prouder of being over here, I believe, than the men are. I doubt if even a handful of them would go home if given a chance.

THE MOST soldierly of all the WACs I've seen is Anne Bradley, of Philadelphia. Furthermore she is so good-looking it makes you hurt. In addition she has a personality that breaks you down, without resistance. And to top off the indignity of one small person having all those blessings, she's got brains as well.

Sergeant Bradley so definitely should be an officer that I asked her boss about it, and the reply was this: "She would be an officer now if she had stayed in America, but she passed up that chance in order to get overseas, and we can't promote in the field the way the army does. If I could just put a second lieutenant's bars on Bradley right now my worries would be over."

The sergeant is so photogenic that she is on some of the WAC recruiting posters. But she has never pretended to be a professional beauty. Actually she is a career woman. She is 24, yet before enlisting she was personnel director of a large company.

She runs her half of the company with gay-hearted quips that have a terrible firmness. When she walks it's like an animated statue, she's so straight.

* * *

MARGARET MILLER of Stow, O., is what is known as company artificer. That means carpenter and jack of all trades. Margaret is short, dark and stubby, has a boyish bob, wears overalls, carries a hammer, and goes by the name of Butch.

She does all the fixing around the joint, repairs the plumbing, moves furniture, patches holes in the floor, and puts up wooden crosses to hold mosquito nets over beds.

Butch says that for the two years previous to joining the WACs she was a combination bartender and bouncer in a saloon. She gets her really heavy work done by saving it up till the garbage men come past. She gives them a bottle of wine and some fast talk, and presto!, everything is moved.

I asked the sergeant if Butch had any boy friends, and she said.

"Does she! The first week we were here one G. I. wrote several times a day threatening to blow his brains out if she didn't tell him she loved him. And she wouldn't, because she didn't."

There is an anti-aircraft battery near Butch's barracks and she is always taking hot coffee out to the boys. One evening Butch didn't show up at "lights out," so they sent some of the girls to look for her. Butch had delivered her coffee and started home all right, but got tired and lay down in the grass for a while. The searching party found her there, fast asleep.

A Farmer's Diary

By CALVIN A. BYERS

Wheat Harvest, 1943

THE WHEAT harvest came on rapidly this year. Almost every farmer in our neighborhood was cutting the same day—July 3rd. The weather was very warm, and most horses were left in pasture while tractors pulled the binders. Women or old men rode the harvesters while younger men operated the constantly moving tractors.

Help is scarce. In most fields, when the large space of grain was cut, long lines of sheaves stretched in prone windrows. When evening came and the straw was too tough for further cutting, I often saw a man, alone, shocking wheat — a mere dot of a man upon a vast field of harvest.

Where families were large, the work went faster. I saw one group—father, mother and four children—working and singing while the shocks moved together like magic. When morning came, almost all the fields were finished.

One farm owner, a successful merchant, was helping his tenant and two boys. The rugged renter, in coveralls, seemed to enjoy the task. To the eager boys, bare backed and brown, it was a frolic. But for the heavy, 'soft' business man, it was a task that took great moral courage—and he was game! He mopped his face and shrugged his shoulders and stuck until the job was finished.

Farther west, in another field, I saw a city man helping two old people. The old farmer had had his grain cut by a neighbor, and at dusk, he, his crippled wife, and the city worker—all of them past 65—were starting ten acres of heavy wheat.

I talked with the city man. "No—they're not relatives of mine," he told me. "We've known each other a good many years and we've both got three grandsons apiece in the overseas forces. They wanted to pay me, but I couldn't do it that way. I was thinking about keeping the crop from loss—working for the boys overseas, not for the farmer. Same way at the shop. It isn't the company or the foreman we're thinking of—nor even the inspector. It's the stars and stripes awaving over us all—and may God bless 'em!"
